MESSAGE

OF

GOVERNOR OLIVER P. MORTON.

DELIVERED JANUARY 11, 1867.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

Throughout the year which has just passed, the people of Indiana have been greatly blessed. The pestilence which desolated other parts of the country touched within our borders but lightly, and did not long remain, and good health has generally prevailed to an unusual degree.

Although one of our staple crops has fallen short, causing loss and embarrassment to many, yet we have had great and almost unexampled prosperity.

Agriculture has been prosperous, commerce has flourished, manufactures have been extended, public improvements of various kinds projected and successfully prosecuted.

When we consider that the country has just emerged from a dreadful war in which our State bore a distinguished part, and suffered greatly in the loss of thousands of her best citizens, and the withdrawal from labor and business of many thousands more, her general prosperity and growth in population and wealth is as surprising as it is gratifying.

According to the census of 1860, the population of Indiana was one million three hundred and fifty thousand four hundred and twenty-eight (1,350,428).

Part 2.—D. J.—1

By the enumeration which has been made and returned to the Auditor of State, under an act of the last Legislature, it is shown that, in 1866 the State had a population of three hundred and forty thousand two hundred and forty (340,240) white males over the age of twenty-one years, which number multiplied by the ratio usually adopted, would give a population of over one million seven hundred thousand. The estimate will also be sustained by comparing the aggregate vote of 1860 with that of 1866, and shows an increase of more than three hundred and fifty thousand in six years.

According to this ratio of increase the State will have within her borders in 1870 more than two millions of people, which would be an increase of over forty-eight per cent. in ten years. It is doubtful whether any State in the Union is growing more rapidly in population, wealth, manufactures, public improvements, and the general development of agricultural resources. This great result is owing, in large part, to the high character which the State has acquired during the war.

The large number of men she furnished to the armies of the Union, under circumstances of great trial and difficulty, their uniform and distinguished gallantry on every battle field, surpassed by the soldiers of no other State, the great and continued liberality of her people for sanitary purposes and to relieve the distress growing out of the war, and the faithful performance of all obligations of whatsoever kind in the midst of the great conflict, have commanded universal admiration and directed the attention of the enterprising, and those who in every State are seeking for new homes, to the advantages presented to the labor and capital of the immigrant.

GOVERNOR BAKER.

I was absent from the State on account of ill health, from the 16th day of November, 1865, until the 17th day of April, 1866, during which period the duties of the office, under the Constitution, were performed by Governor Baker. The great ability and fidelity to the interests of the State which distinguished the administration of Governor Baker, commanded the general approval of the people, and makes a public acknowledgment on my part proper as well as a great pleasure. The duties which devolved upon him were of an important character, and were so well and faithfully discharged as to be satisfactory to all.

THE PUBLIC DEBT OF THE STATE.

The public debt of the State outstanding in the hands of creditors, to be provided for, is as follows :

Five per cent. stocks.....	$3,829,936 33
Two and a half per cent. stocks.....	1,191,091 65
Total amount of stocks.....	$5,021,027 98
War Loan Bonds	309,000 00
Vincennes University Bonds.....	66,585 00
Total public debt.....	$5,396,612 98

The Auditor estimates that the State Debt Sinking Fund tax for 1866 will, on the 1st day of July next, furnish nine hundred thousand dollars, ($900,000) and that enough can be drawn from the General Fund in the Treasury at that time, and added to this amount, to redeem all the outstanding two and a half per cent. stocks, which will leave outstanding in the hands of creditors, to be provided for otherwise, four million two hundred and five thousand five hundred and twenty-one dollars and thirty-three cents $4,205,521.33).

The assets of the Sinking Fund, independent of State stocks and bonds, which by the law of last winter are to be applied to the payment of the State debt, may be safely estimated at one million dollars ($1,000,000) of which amount five hundred thousand dollars (500,000) can be made available by the 1st of July, 1870, and which, if properly applied, would leave the balance of the debt to be provided for and paid by taxation, three million seven hundred and five thousand five hundred and twenty-one dollars and thirty-three cents $3,705,521.33), which, it is estimated by the Auditor, will be fully accomplished, at the present rate of taxation for that purpose, by the 1st of July, 1870.

This shows the financial condition of the State to be better than at any former period in her history, and presents the gratifying prospect that by 1870 she will have taken up all her stocks and be out of debt, without adding to the taxes which have been already imposed.

To avoid confusion of ideas it must be borne in mind that the money and property of whatever kind belonging to the old Sinking Fund are held for the benefit of the School Fund, and while so much of the State Debt as may be purchased by the Sinking Fund is thereby extinguished in so far as creditors and the public are concerned, yet it must, in another form, be kept alive for the benefit of the School Fund.

The report of the State Auditor will be found to be an able and thorough document, giving a full exposition of the business affairs of the State.

In the above estimate of the indebtedness of the State I have omitted the internal improvement bonds, amounting to three hundred and fifty-three thousand dollars ($353,000.)

The Auditor in his report, following the example of his predecessors for more than twenty years, has put these bonds down as a part of the indebtedness of the State. They belong to the old debt of the State upon which a compromise was made in 1846, the holders of them failing or refusing to enter into or take part in the compromise. Upon these bonds interest has not been paid for more than twenty-five years. The attitude of the State in regard to them is not creditable and ought to be changed. Year by year the State by her accounting officers publishes and confesses to the world that they are a part of her indebtedness, but pays no interest on them, which has now accumulated to more than half a million of dollars, and makes no offer to pay the principal although it has long been due. The character of Indiana is too high, and her position too proud to allow her to occupy an attitude so equivocal. It not my purpose to enter into any discussion at this time as to the legal and moral obligation of the State to pay the interest and principal of these bonds in whole or in part; but I desire simply to say that if the State believes that she is not bound to pay them, and does not intend to do so, she should through the Legislature, promptly declare that fact to the world, and have them stricken from the books of the Auditor.

If, on the other hand, she holds herself bound to pay the whole or any part, she can not honorably longer delay to take action for that purpose, as her ability to pay cannot be denied.

STATE DEBT SINKING FUND.

In pursuance of the provisions of an act passed at the late special session of the Legislature, creating a State Debt Sinking Fund, for the payment of the State debt, and abolishing the Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners and all offices connected therewith, the Auditor, Treasurer and Agent of State, acting as the State Debt Sinking Fund Board, have purchased in the market four hundred and sixty thousand, thirty-six dollars and ninety-one cents of the certificates of Stock, bearing interest at the rate of two and a half per cent., which they have caused to be cancelled.

The Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners, by virtue of an act passed also at the late extra session, directing them to invest any moneys belonging to the Fund, in Indiana State Bonds or Stocks, have purchased Stocks and Bonds to the amount of seven hundred and nine thousand and twenty-four dollars and eighty-five cents.

The Auditor of State and the Agent of State in their reports point out several material defects in the first of the above mentioned acts which require legislative remedy. In addition to those pointed out by these officers, I will call your attention to another.

The seventh section of the act abolishes the Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners on the 20th day of January, 1867, and directs that all the property of whatever kind, both real and personal, belonging to said Fund, together with the books and papers, be surrendered and turned over to the Auditor. The annual sale of Sinking Fund lands took place on the 11th day of December, 1866, and by the terms of the law, deeds are to be made to the purchasers of such lands as are not redeemed at the expiration of sixty days from that time, which will be in February, at which time the Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners having ceased to exist, there will be no officer having authority to execute the conveyances. It will therefore be necessary to empower some officer or officers to execute the deeds and perfect the contract with the purchasers.

The act is further defective in failing to give the Auditor authority to collect the money upon the Bonds and Mortgages falling due, which are to be placed in his hands by the Sinking Fund, by selling the mortgaged lands.

Such authority should be directly conferred, and he, or other proper officers, should be empowered to execute conveyances to the purchasers.

As the law now stands after the 20th of January, 1867, there will be no officer authorized to sell the mortgaged lands or make deeds to purchasers therefor.

The borrowers from the Sinking Fund on mortgage security, have, by special enactment, had their loans extended for five years from 1868, by paying the amount due in equal annual installments. Upon their failure to pay any of these installments, their lands can be offered for sale, and if there are no cash bidders, sold on a credit of five years. This may defer a collection of a part of the money for eleven years, and as the State has abandoned the policy of lending money on mortgage security, it will be inconvenient and unnecessary to keep these claims outstanding so long, and I therefore recommend that the law be so changed that when the mortgaged lands are sold, they be sold for cash, and thus close up the transaction five years sooner.

SINKING FUND INVESTIGATION.

At the late special session a concurrent resolution was adopted, directing the Governor to appoint a Committee of three persons to investigate the management and operations of the Sinking Fund, and the manner in which the moneys belonging to it had been invested or deposited.

Governor Baker appointed on this Committee, Hon. E. W. H. Ellis, Hon. John A. Matson and Major Thomas J. De La Hunt. The Committee met and organized by the appointment of Charles P. Jacobs, Esq., as Secretary, and proceeded to the investigation.

Their report, accompanied with the evidence in the matter is herewith submitted.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S REPORT.

The office of Adjutant General has been well and ably administered by General Terrell. The report which he is publishing will consist of seven large volumes, of which six have been already issued, and will be invaluable as a history of the officers and soldiers of Indiana during the late rebellion. It is intended to give the name and military history of every officer and soldier who went into the army from this State, and thus furnish a public record of the service, and honorable discharge of every good soldier, and fix the status of every deserter and of every man who was dismissed or punished for cowardice or crime. The value of the record will increase with years, and will be held sacred by coming generations, to whom it will perpetuate the honorable deeds of their ancestors; and it is to be regretted that the Legislature did not make provisions to have the work stereotyped and the plates purchased and held by the State. From those who have compared it with the reports from other States, I am assured that it will be found to be more complete in its information and perfect in its arrangement than any similar work, and General Terrell is certainly entitled to great credit for the ability, care and industry displayed in its preparation.

QUARTERMASTER GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

The State received from the General Government at various times during the war for the use of the Indiana Legion (41,572) forty-one thousand five hundred and seventy-two pieces of small arms, and twenty-one pieces of artillery, with carriages, caissons, and equipments, all of which were charged to the State, and required to be accounted for.

The report of the State Quartermaster, General Stone, shows that (41,212) forty-one thousand two hundred and twelve guns have been returned to the proper United States ordnance officers at this point, and (530) five hundred and thirty guns lost and destroyed in the service have been accounted for by proper affidavits, making a total of (41,742) forty-one thousand seven hundred and forty-two guns accounted for to the General Government, and that all the artillery, caissons and equipments have been returned. This leaves the State clear of all liability on the score of arms for the use of the militia, and the account has been closed, which is a most desirable result.

General Stone's report is lengthy, and gives a comprehensive statement of the operations of the Quartermaster's Department from the time of his appointment. The Department has been a large and cumbrous machine, but has been managed with great fidelity, ability and success, for which General Stone is well entitled to the thanks of the State. His position has been one of great responsibility and labor, and its duties have been performed to my entire satisfaction. Your attention is especially invited to the interesting details in his Report.

PAYMASTER GENERAL'S REPORT.

The report of Major Stearns Fisher, Paymaster of the Indiana Legion, shows that about fifty thousand men have received pay for military service in repelling rebel raids and guarding against invasion.

The whole amount of money disbursed by him for military service amounts to five hundred and sixty-six thousand three hundred and ninety dollars and twenty-eight cents ($566,390.28). There still remain unpaid claims allowed by the Auditing Committee amounting to over thirty-three thousand dollars, which are being paid as fast as presented. And there are also claims, apparently just, amounting to twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars, which have been presented since the Auditing Committee was abolished, but cannot be paid until an appropriation is made for that purpose. Although the amount of money disbursed is not very large comparatively, yet it has been paid out in small sums and the business has been complex, involving a great number of accounts, and has been ably and faithfully performed by Major Fisher.

COLONEL WILLIAM H. SCHLATER.

Colonel William H. Schlater has acted as my Military Secretary, except during the time that he was in the field, from the beginning of the war. His ability for the correct and rapid dispatch of business as a Secretary, is without a superior, and his accurate recollection of names, dates, and minute circumstances connected with the organization of the army, rendered his services most valuable. Our relations have been most agreeable, and it affords me pleasure to make this public acknowledgment.

MILITARY AGENCIES.

The military agencies in this city and in Washington for the prosecution and collection, free of charge, of bounties, back pay and pensions, due to soldiers and soldiers' widows and orphans, have been kept in operation, and have transacted a large amount of business and rendered great service to those who are poorly able to pay for it. The report of William Hannaman, Esq., gives a full statement of the transactions of the two agencies and contains matter and suggestions of much interest and importance. In my opinion the agencies ought to be maintained and their sphere of usefulness enlarged by appropriate legislation.

BENEVOLENT INSTITUTIONS.

The general management of the Institutions for the Blind and Deaf and Dumb, and the Asylum for the Insane, has been satisfactory, and I believe that the Board of Trustees and the several superintendents have labored to conduct them upon sound and economical principles. At the last session of the General Assembly an act was passed authorizing the enlargement of the Insane Asylum for the reception and care of the "incurable insane." The construction of the buildings has been commenced, but further appropriations will be required for their completion. The necessity for this enlargement and addition cannot be denied. Many cases of the "incurable insane" have come to my knowledge, where the patients are without friends, or their friends are unable to take care of them, and which are of a character to make it difficult to provide for them in the County Poor Houses, and render it important that the new building should be completed without delay.

The general efficiency and success of the benevolent institutions of Indiana are creditable to the intelligence and humanity of her people.

PENITENTIARIES.

The reports from the Boards of Trustees and the Wardens of the Northern and Southern Prisons, and other information I have received, show that the Prisons have been well and economically conducted. A fire occurred in the machine shops of the Southern Prison last summer, by which considerable damage was done, and a number of convicts thrown out of employment. As they could not again be returned to labor until the damages had been repaired, for which there was no appropriation, I took the responsibility of urging the State Treasurer, Honorable John I. Morrison, to pay from the Treasury the necessary amount to make the repairs, which he did, and I now respectfully ask this General Assembly to approve his conduct. It was done to prevent a considerable loss to the State in the way of convict labor.

The report of the Board of Trustees of the Northern Prison states that the sum of sixty-three thousand eight hundred and ninety-two dollars and seventy-six cents will be necessary to complete the construction of that prison, and for deficiencies on account of work and materials already furnished, eighty-seven thousand nine hundred and twenty-nine dollars and forty-three cents, for which amounts an appropriation is asked, and to which your attention is specially directed.

HOUSE OF REFUGE.

The second section of the ninth article of the Constitution reads as follows:

"The General Assembly shall provide Houses of Refuge for the reformation and correction of juvenile offenders."

This constitutional provision, adopted in 1851, and which is plainly mandatory in its character, up to this time remains wholly unexe-cuted. The necessity for such institutions is admitted by all who are at all familiar with the administration of the law, and I believe that a strong public sentiment demands that the legislative consideration of the subject shall not be longer postponed. We have no punishment now for the juvenile offender but the common jail and the penitentiary, neither of which exert a reformatory influence upon the youthful mind; and during my six years experience as the Executive of the State, I have often been constrained to pardon the youthful criminal because I felt that to incarcerate him in the penitentiary would be to consign him to a life of degradation and crime. Humanity, justice, and the plainest principles of public policy, demand that the juvenile offender shall not be treated like the mature and hardened criminal, and placed in the society of felons; but that an effort shall be made while he is yet in tender years, to reclaim him from vice and train him to a life of usefulness and respectability.

The "House of Refuge," as it has long existed in many of the older States, is a vast improvement upon the jail and the penitentiary; but within the last few years great progress has been made in elevating the system, and results have been obtained in the reform and education of juvenile offenders that are truly wonderful.

The introduction of the "Reform School" is, in many respects, a great improvement upon the old House of Refuge, and has been attended with a success which it would be hard to believe, were it not attested by indubitable evidence.

Barnabas C. Hobbs and Charles F. Coffin, distinguished members of the Society of Friends, have bestowed much attention and labor upon the subject, and have addressed to me valuable communications, which I herewith lay before you, together with reports and documents setting forth the character and operations of the Reform Schools of New York, Ohio and Illinois.

As the subject is one of no ordinary magnitude, and requires for its full understanding much thought and investigation, and as the system you may adopt will be intended not for a year only, but for all time, and should be wisely considered, I recommend that committees be appointed at an early day, with full powers to investigate the subject and report a plan, if possible, for your consideration and action at the present session.

SUPREME COURT.

I deem it my duty to direct your attention to the fact that no provision has been made for the accommodation of the Supreme Court.

The State House does not afford sufficient room at any time, and during the sessions of the Legislature none of the Judges can occupy rooms there for chambers. The large and increasing business of the Court can not be promptly disposed of unless the Judges have comfortable chambers, with convenient access to the law library, and the judicial records.

The importance and dignity of the Court, the necessity for the prompt dispatch of its business, and a proper regard for the comfort and convenience of the Judges, require that the Court room, clerk's office, law library, and the chambers, should be situated adjacent to each other. It is not becoming or excusable, that the judicial department of the government should be neglected and left to shift about for a local habitation, deprived of those conveniences necessary to the speedy and comfortable performance of its duties.

. ENUMERATION AND APPORTIONMENT.

At the Special Session of the General Assembly, in 1865, an act was passed directing that an enumeration of the white male inhabitants over twenty-one years of age, be made in each county in the State, prescribing rules and regulations therefor.

This enumeration has been made and properly returned to the Auditor of State, who has caused it to be published.

Section 5, article 4, of the Constitution of the State declares that: "The number of Senators and Representatives shall at the session next following the period of making such enumeration be fixed by law, and apportioned among the several counties according to the number of white male inhabitants above twenty-one years of age in each."

This provision is positive and mandatory in its character, and requires this General Assembly to apportion Senators and Representatives among the several counties in the State, according to the number of white male inhabitants above twenty-one years of age in each.

The State for full six years has been without a law apportioning Senators and Representatives in the several counties. During that time members of the General Assembly have been elected by common consent, and from necessity, upon the basis of the old law.

While these elections are really without authority of law, but from necessity must be received as legal, the basis made by the old apportionment, has by lapse of time and changes of population become grossly inequitable.

The relative population of counties and Senatorial and Representative Districts has in many cases, become so greatly altered as to conflict utterly with the theory of representation prescribed by the Constitution.

As the General Assembly is now in possession of the proper data upon which to make an apportionment, I trust that duty will be fully performed before your final adjournment.

REGISTRY LAW.

The purity of the ballot-box is essential to the maintenance of free institutions. In so far as it is corrupted, it not only fails to express the will of the people but defeats their will, and places the political and civil power in the hands of fraudulent holders. If we would have the decisions of the ballot box respected, and the voice of the majority peacefully obeyed, it must be by making our elections an honest exposition of the people's will, an exposition so fairly and certainly made as to leave in the public mind no want of confidence in its integrity. But upon that subject I need not enlarge, as there is not a member of this General Assembly who does not fully comprehend its vital importance, and I will proceed at once to the consideration of the evil for which if possible, a remedy should be found.

It is a notorious fact that under our election laws, men go to the polls and vote, who at the time have not the right to vote anywhere; that men vote in precincts and townships where they do not reside, and often vote several times on the same day, at different places, and sometimes at the same place.

The oath which is prescribed by law to be administered to persons, whose votes are challenged, has been found practically to furnish but little security against fraudulent voting,

The statute provides, that if taken it shall be conclusive as to the right of the person to vote, and no other evidence shall be received to impeach its truth.

In cities and precincts where the vote is large, it is administered in haste, and is received by those who are intent on fraudulent voting as an empty form, which carries with it no terrors, and to which little attention is paid. The only remedy for this evil, in my judgment, is the enactment of a law requiring all legal voters to be registered, in books prepared for that purpose, and before such officers, and in such manner and form as may be prescribed. Such registry to be completed by a time certain before the election, kept at a known place, and exposed to public inspection, that errors may be corrected and frauds detected.

It has been said, however, that under the Constitution a Registry Law can not be adopted. The constitutional provision is in these words :

“Article I. Section 2. In all elections not otherwise provided for by this Constitution, every white male citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years and upwards, who shall have resided in the State during the six months immediately preceding such election; and every white male of foreign birth, of the age of twenty-one years and upwards, who shall have resided in the United States one year, and shall have resided in this State during the six months immediately preceding such election, and shall have declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States, conformably to the laws of the United States on the subject of naturalization, shall be entitled to vote in the township, or precinct where he may reside.”

From this it will appear that persons otherwise qualified have the right to vote, if they are residents of the township or precinct on the day of the election, and have had no previous residence therein, whence it has been said that a law requiring a registry on a day previous to the day of election, would be unconstitutional. There is, in my opinion, no force in this objection. The question as to the way and manner of proving residence is entirely within the control of the Legislature. It may by law require verbal proof, as it now does, or, it may require the evidence to be in writing. It may accept of the oath of the person proposing to vote as conclusive, or, it may reject his oath altogether and require the testimony of other persons. The Legislature has, from time to time, regulated the competency of witnesses and the form of giving testimony in courts of justice, in some cases requiring it to be in written depositions taken out of court, and in others the personal presence of the witnesses before the court and jury. It certainly has equal power to determine in what manner the proof of residence shall be made before an election board.

All persons claiming the right to vote who are residents of the township or precinct, at a time certain before the election, say thirty days, can be legally required to have their names registered, in such place, and in such manner and form as may be prescribed, and the registry thus made to constitute the legal evidence of their qualifications and right to vote. For such persons who claim to have acquired a residence within the township, or precinct, within thirty days before the election, or on the day of the election, special provision can be made.

The constitutional provision of Illinois upon this subject is as follows:

“ARTICLE II. Section 1. In all elections every white male citizen above the age of twenty-one years, having resided in the State one year next preceding any election, shall be entitled to vote at such election; and every white male inhabitant of the age aforesaid, who may be a resident of the State at the time of the adoption of this Constitution shall have the right of voting as aforesaid; but no citizen or inhabitant shall be entitled to vote, except in the district or county in which he shall actually reside at the time of such election.”

It will be seen that upon the subject of residence in the township or precinct it is the same as ours, it being sufficient to acquire the residence on the day of the election. The Legislature of Illinois has enacted a Registry law, and have provided that persons, claiming the right to vote, whose names are not upon the registry, shall make their affidavits in writing stating specifically, the place where they live, when they acquired their residence, and their occupation, which affidavit must be sustained by the testimony in writing of some other person of acknowledged residence in the township or precinct. The cases coming under these specific provisions must ordinarily be few in number, and give but little delay or embarrassment to the election Board, while the safeguards furnished against fraudulent voting are most obvious. In the one class of cases the registry constitutes the evidence of the right to vote, and in the other class the written affidavits, and there can be no question as to the legality of both provisions. It is quite possible that a better method can be adopted as to cases of late residence, than that prescribed by the Legislature of Illinois, which I have referred to only to show one plan which is in use.

I commend the subject to your earnest and immediate attention, trusting that the state of the public mind and the condition of parties are such that there will be no hesitation in any quarter in effecting the much needed reform.

SOLDIERS' AND SEAMEN'S HOME.

When the war ended and our armies were mustered out of the service, and hospitals broken up, there were many gallant soldiers who were disabled by wounds and diseases contracted in the service from making their own living, and taking care of themselves. Many of them were without homes and without friends, who must either pass into the common poor houses of the country as paupers, be subsisted by private charity, or provided for by the State. The support furnished by private charity, would be precarious and uncertain, and justice, humanity, and the honor of the State forbade that these men should suffer for the comforts of life, or find that the poor house and the society of paupers should be the end and reward of their campaigns, in which they had sacrificed their health and capacity to provide for themselves. The State had called them to the field, and they had nobly responded by abandoning their occupations, leaving behind them family, friends, the comforts and pleasures of life, and entered the army to fight for a cause in which they had no greater interest than those who remained at home to pursue their avocations and live quietly and safely with their families and friends.

It was not charity, it was not benevolence on the part of the people or the State to make liberal and generous provision for these men, but it was a duty than which none could be higher or more sacred. Accordingly, to meet immediate demands for relief, and to inaugurate a measure imperatively demanded by humanity and the strongest obligations, on the 15th day of May, 1865, I issued an address for the purpose of enlisting the sympathies of the people in establishing a Soldiers' and Seamen's Home, and in pursuance of the invitation contained in it, two successive meetings were held at Indianapolis for the purpose of effecting a temporary organization of a Home for Disabled Indiana Soldiers and Seamen, and to institute a system for the collection of voluntary contributions sufficient ultimately to place it on a permanent foundation.

At the second of these meetings, held on the 24th day of May, 1865, a temporary organization was effected, the basis of which will be seen by reference to a copy of the proceedings of said meeting herewith respectfully submitted. The temporary Home was opened in the city hospital building at Indianapolis, on the 27th day of August, 1865, and up to the 30th day of November, 1866, the number of men admitted was 224. Of this number 134 have been discharged, fourteen have died, and seventy-six remain in the Home. Early last spring the Board of Directors purchased the property known as the "Knightstown Springs," in Rush county, at a cost of $8,500, to which place the Home was removed on the 26th day of April. The total expense of maintaining the Home from the time it was opened until the 30th of November last, not including the cost of purchase, is $17,060.84. This includes the salaries of officers. If we add to the above sum the cost of purchase, it will make the sum of $25,560.84, all of which has been raised by private contribution.

I herewith submit the report of Dr. Wishard, the excellent and successful Superintendent of the institution, and quote from it the following extract, as descriptive of the property which has been purchased :

“The farm consists of fifty-four (54) acres of excellent land, thirty-five (35) of which are under cultivation — the balance a beautiful grove of forest timber. The buildings are large and commodious, affording ample room for about one hundred patients. They were, however, much dilapidated and out of repair, but have been repaired until they are now very comfortable. Some additions have also been made in the way of hospital buildings, which are of great advantage in the treatment of the sick and wounded.”

As lingering wounds, disease and old age do their work, the number of men to be cared for must largely increase for some years, and the question is presented, in what manner the institution shall be maintained ?

Thus far it has been built up and supported by private contribution, resulting from the labor of a few men, but it cannot be kept in operation longer in this way. The obligation to support our disabled veterans rests equally upon all, while the number of persons who give by private contributions is small, and they are already tired and demand that the burden shall be made to fall upon all the people according to their capacity to pay. That this demand is just and patriotic, I will not further argue, and earnestly recommend that committees be appointed to investigate and examine into the character of the institution, and upon their report, if satisfactory, it be adopted by the State, and appropriations made to carry it on for the next two years.

The National Government has made arrangements for the establishment and maintenance of Soldier's and Seamen's Homes in several of the States, and it is quite possible that these institutions when established will have capacity to receive and accommodate all, including disabled soldiers and seamen of Indiana.

When this comes to pass it will not be necessary to continue our Home, as such, longer, and the fine property where it is located can doubtless be turned to some other humane purpose. But until that occurs, it is, in my judgment, the duty of the State to adopt the Home and make appropriations for its support.

It would not be just to pass from this subject without stating the fact that the general management and supervision of the Soldiers' Home since its first organization has been under the care and direction of William Hannaman, Esq.; his heart has been in his work, and he has given to it unremitting attention, and much of its success has resulted from his labor.

THE SOLDIER'S ORPHAN.

The soldier's orphan has not been provided for. From a return made by County Auditors to a circular addressed to them by Mr. Hannaman, it is estimated that there are in the State 2,070 orphans whose fathers have perished in the army, and a number of whom are now in the county poor houses. Their natural protectors and guardians, by whose labor they were to be supported and educated, have died in the service of their country. Many of these orphans are left in destitute and helpless circumstances, without relatives or friends who are able or willing to give them training or education. Are they not the wards of the State? Is it not the duty of the State, dictated alike by justice, humanity, and the sacrifice made by their dead fathers, to step forward as far as possible, take the father's place in giving to these orphans protection and a sufficient education to fit them for useful and honorable members of society? Can the proposition be strengthened by argument? Does not the bare statement of it carry conviction to the mind and touch the heart of every patriotic man? The way and manner in which this can be accomplished, is a proper subject for legislative research and discovery. But it has been suggested that if the General Government shall finally provide for our disabled soldiers and seamen, that the beautiful property near Knightstown, might be converted into a "Soldier's Orphans Home."

CEMETERIES AND MONUMENTS.

The report of Colonel James Blake, who was appointed Commissioner to represent Indiana on the Board of Managers of the Gettysburg Cemetery, contains a full history of the Cemetery, its condition, the amount of money required to finish it, and the proportion due from Indiana.

Papers will also be laid before you in relation to the Cemetery at Antietam, and asking a small appropriation to defray so much of the expense as falls to Indiana in the general arrangement.

The Board of Trustees of Crown Hill Cemetery, situated about two miles from this city, donated a sufficient and beautiful part of the Cemetery for the burial of Union soldiers who died in the camps and hospitals at this place, and such as might be brought from elsewhere. The Government of the United States, represented by General Ekin, accepted the donation and agreed to pay the Crown Hill Cemetery Association the sum of five thousand dollars to be expended in the improvement of the grounds, and the dead have already been removed from the places where they were first laid and buried, to the new Cemetery.

In this Cemetery there is a high hill, quite overlooking the city, and I recommend that upon this hill the State erect a monument in memory of her brave soldiers who perished in the rebellion. We cannot pay too much honor to the memory of the men who died for their country. This monument, overlooking all the country around, would be the first object to greet the eye of the traveler as he approaches the capital, and in the language of the great Webster, when he laid the corner-stone of Bunker Hill monument at Boston: "Let it rise! let it rise, till it meet the sun in its coming; let the earliest light of the morning gild it, and parting day linger and play upon its summit." To this monument each county of the State should be requested to contribute one block bearing such inscription as it might choose in commemoration of its dead and the part it bore in the war.

EMIGRATION.

On the 18th of January, 1866, Gov. Baker issued to John A. Wilstach, Esq., an appointment as "Commissioner for the encouragement of emigration to the State of Indiana, and to take such steps both in the United States and in Europe as he may deem advisable for that purpose."

Mr. Wilstach's report is herewith submitted, and your attention invited to the important suggestions it contains.

It is not necessary to argue the importance of adding to the wealth and population of Indiana by increasing the emigration to her borders from the various countries of Europe. The agricultural and mineral resources of the State are as yet comparatively undeveloped, for the want of population, labor and capital. Nearly one-fourth of the whole area of the State is a coal field, a large part of which is said to be of the best quality. Excellent iron ore is found in vast quantities in many of the counties, and, throughout the State, excepting a few small localities, the soil is rich and fertile, capable of producing all the grains, grasses and fruits in the greatest abundance. The State abounds in fine timber, and living streams of water, and in every respect presents facilities for an easy and profitable agriculture, while an abundance of coal and water power furnishes the means for manufacturing on the largest scale and cheapest terms. Large tracts of country are yet unsettled, and in many counties the population is quite sparse, and it is not too much to say that the State can support, in ease and comfort, a population three or four times larger than the present.

The people of Europe desiring to emigrate to this country can not and will not select Indiana as a home unless they are advised there is such a State, and are informed somewhat in regard to its character, population, productions, improvements, climate, and the special advantages it presents to the emigrant. When we consider how little the mass of the people of this country know in regard to the condition and character of the interior countries of Europe, we may form some opinion as to how little the masses of the people there understand about ourselves and our State. While they may have a general knowledge of the character of this country, it is the specific knoweldge of our State which will bring them to her borders, and this is what we should labor to give them.

I therefore earnestly recommend the establishment of a Bureau of Emigration, upon a plan similar to that adopted by several of the Western States, providing for one or more Agents in Europe, whose duty it shall be to furnish to persons about to emigrate to America, information of the geography, population, wealth and resources of the State, and the prospects for health, comfort, wealth and education presented to those who come in search of new homes, and of such facilities for getting here as the State may be able to furnish. Some of our sister States have in this way added largely to their population and wealth, and while we are somewhat late in beginning, it will be later and worse for us the longer it is put off.

The fact that Indiana is rapidly growing in wealth and population, furnishes no reason why that growth should not be greatly accelerated by the use of means so simple and legitimate in their character, and costing so little when compared with the great advantages to be derived. I had the honor to call the attention of the Legislature to this subject at the regular session in 1865, and beg leave to repeat the arguments and recommendations I then offered.

I request your special attention to that part of Mr. Wilstach's report in which he describes the effort made and the difficulties attending it, to make an exhibition of Indiana productions, manufactures and mineral resources at the "World's Fair," to be held in Paris this year. The importance of thus presenting to the people of the "Old World" in a tangible form the great resources of our State, requires no illustration.

SCHOOLS.

The School Fund of Indiana may be estimated in round numbers at $7,611,337.44, and is, I believe, larger than the School Fund of any other State.

While our school system is far from being what it ought to be, yet it is being gradually and substantially improved. The standard of qualification for teachers has been elevated, and teaching, as a science, is far better understood than formerly. The want of qualified teachers, which has been one of the chief obstacles in the way of the efficiency of our schools, will be greatly diminished in a few years by the Normal School, which was authorized by the last General Assembly, and which I trust will be speedily put into successful operation. The other great evil consists in the fact that the schools are kept for too short a time, and this can only be remedied by increasing, from taxation and other sources that might be made available, the annual revenue for school purposes. I will enter into no argument before this General Assembly to prove the importance of education, and that our schools should be open to all, and able to furnish an education sufficient for the ordinary business of life; but assuming that all admit this truth, will simply say that the common schools of Indiana can not furnish such an education without they are continued for a longer period in each year.

EDUCATION OF COLORED CHILDREN.

In my message delivered to the Legislature at the late extra session, I presented the importance of providing for the education of colored children in language which I beg leave here to repeat.

The first section of article eight of our State Constitution provides as follows:

"Knowledge and learning generally diffused throughout a community, being essential to the preservation of a free Government, it shall be the duty of the General Assembly to encourage, by all suitable means, moral, intellectual, scientific and agricultural improvement; and to provide by law for a general and uniform system of common schools, wherein tuition shall be without charge, and equally open to all."

The language of this provision is very broad, and would seem, in letter and in spirit, to embrace all the children of the State, without regard to color.

Surely it cannot be denied that, as we have a colored population in our midst, it is our interest, independent of those considerations of natural justice and humanity which plead so strongly to educate and elevate that population.

An ignorant and degraded element is a burden and injury to society, whatever may be its color. It therefore becomes a matter of sound political economy, as well as absolute justice, that whatever colored population we may have, should be educated and enabled to become intelligent, indutrious, and useful members of the community.

The laws of Indiana exclude colored children from the common schools, and make no provision whatever for their education. I would therefore recommend that the laws be so amended as to require an enumeration to be made of the colored children of the State, and such a portion of the School Fund as may be in proportion to their number, be set apart and applied to their education by the establishment of separate schools, under such suitable provisions and regulations as may be proper. I would not recommend that white and colored children be placed together in the same schools, believing, as I do, in the present state of public opinion, that to do so would create dissatisfaction and conflict, and impair the usefulness of the schools.

I am informed that a system can be devised by which separate schools for the education of colored children can be successfully maintained in various parts of the State, and believe that justice, humanity and sound policy, require that it should be done.

By the school law of 1865, negroes and mulattoes are not taxed for the support of common schools, but if colored schools should be established this law should be so amended as to subject them to like taxation with white persons for educational purposes.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

By an act of Congress thirty thousand acres of land were donated to each State for each Senator and Representative in Congress for the purpose of erecting and maintaining an Agricultural College. This entitled Indiana to ($90,000) three hundred and ninety thousand acres. The act provided that where there were public lands in the State subject to entry at $1.25 per acre, the quantity to which the State was entitled should be selected from such lands; but if there were no such lands in the State, or not enough, the Secretary of the Interior was to issue to such State land scrip for the requisite number of acres. This scrip cannot be located by the State to which it was issued, but must be sold; but the purchasers of such scrip may locate it upon any of the unappropriated land of the United States, subject to sale at private entry at $1.25 or less per acre. There being no public lands in this State for sale at private entry held by the Government at $1.25 per acre, Indiana received her donation in scrip. The original purpose entertained by Congress of establishing Agricultural Colleges in the several States, to be maintained by substantial and sufficient endowments, was most enlightened and patriotic, but we may well doubt the wisdom of the means by which it was to be accomplished. The most of the States, having no lands within their borders upon which this grant could be located were compelled to receive it in scrip, which they were not at liberty to locate in other States and Territories, but were required to sell. Large quantities of the scrip were put upon the market at the same time, and the price suddenly went down until it could not be sold for much over one-third of its par value. There has been no time since the State of Indiana received her scrip at which it could have been sold for more than fifty, or at most fifty-five cents per acre. At fifty-five cents an acre it would only realize ($204,500) two hundred and four thousand five hundred dollars, a sum wholly inadequate to successfully establish and maintain a College upon the broad and comprehensive plan contemplated by Congress. The States became rival venders in the market, and all of them competing directly with the Government, which can not sell land in the regular way at less than $1.25 per acre.

The scrip already sold by the several States has, with a few exceptions, been purchased in quantities by speculators, some of whom will enter and hold large bodies of land to be made valuable by the settlement and improvement of other lands around them, and others will retail the scrip in small quantities at a price greatly advanced over what they gave for it, but still underselling the Government. The reason why the States were not allowed to locate the scrip, was because it would create a monopoly, and enable them to hold lands in perpetuity, but no provision was made against permitting the speculators who purchase the scrip at less than half its value from doing the same thing. While it was not so intended, yet it has turned out that no better arrangement for speculators could have been devised. If the States had been allowed to locate the scrip the land, as soon as entered, would have been worth to them $1.25 per acre, and they might have been required, upon pain of forfeiture to the Government, to sell the same within four or six years, thus avoiding the danger of monopoly and perpetuity, and enabling them to realize at least the par value of the scrip. As the matter has turned out it would have been much better for the State and the Government, if the Government had donated to each State the same number of dollars, instead of acres. Indiana would thus have received three hundred and ninety thousand dollars, and the Government have retained three hundred and ninety thousand acres of land which could be sold at $1.25 an acre.

The Board of Trustees of the Agricultural College, created by an act of the Legislature at the regular session of 1865, memorialized Congress at the late session, praying that the law making the grant to the States might be so amended as to allow the States to locate the scrip under such regulations and restrictions as might be deemed proper to prevent monopoly and perpetuity. But Congress took no action on the subject. The memorial is herewith laid before you.

The Board of Trustees have had a number of meetings to consider what disposition should be made of the scrip, and in view of the fact that it could not be sold without a sacrifice of nearly two-thirds of its par value, which would realize a sum so small as to be inadequate to the accomplishment of the grand purpose which Congress had in view in making the donation, unanimously resolved to withhold it from the market entirely, and submit the whole subject for the action of the Legislature. They have made a report embodying the facts, and containing certain recommendations, which I herewith lay before you, and commend to your special consideration.

THE THIRTEENTH ARTICLE.

By the decision of the Supreme Court at its late session, the XIIIth Article of the Constitution of the State, which prohibits negroes and mulattoes from coming into the State, and from making contracts and acquiring title to property, was declared null and void, as being an infringement of the Constitution of the United States. In this decision it was held that negroes born in the United States are citizens of the United States, and of the State in which they live, and that the XIIIth Article of our Constitution was therefore in violation of that provision of the Constitution of the United States which declares that "the citizens of each State are entitled to the privileges and immunities of the citizens of the several States." The law made in execution of the XIIIth Article is of course a nullity, but I respectfully recommend that as an act of public decency it be formally repealed and wiped out.

NATIONAL DEBT AND THE CURRENCY.

It would be very flattering to our national pride, and would excite the astonishment and admiration of Europe, if we were to pay off our national debt within fifteen or eighteen years; but there are some things more important to us than flattering our vanity or astonishing the people of the Old World.

While I am not in favor of perpetuating the national debt, and do not regard it as a blessing, I am opposed to pressing our people to its sudden payment, just to show what we can do.

If this generation, after having put down the rebellion, shall accomplish the work of restoration, it will have done well, and may very properly leave at least a part of the national debt to be paid by the next.

As the misconduct of the people of the South caused this debt to be contracted, I am decidedly in favor of requiring them and their children to pay their proportion of it, which, in their present destitute and impoverished condition, they cannot do. At this time they have very little property besides lands, and scarce anything to pay taxes on, or pay taxes with, and such their situation must be for years; and until restoration has been completed, and emigration, capital, industry, commerce and agriculture shall have brought to them wealth and prosperity. Whatever part of this debt is paid in the next five or eight years, must, from the condition of things, be collected from the people of the North, and must to that extent relieve the people of the South from a burden, which ought in justice to fall chiefly upon them.

I am therefore in favor of reducing taxation to a standard which will be sufficient to defray the ordinary expenses of the Government, and maintain perfectly the credit of the Nation by paying punctually the interest on the debt, leaving the payment of the principal to times of more general prosperity, when our commerce upon the seas shall have resumed its sway, and a largely increased population has greatly developed the agricultural and mineral resources of the country, and produced an aggregate of wealth compared with which the national debt will be but a trifling per cent.

While it is desirable to return to specie payments, at as early a period as is consistent with maintaining the business prosperity of the country, it is not a result so important that we should hazard general disaster and bankruptcy.

At this time the financial condition of the country is depressed, trade is languishing, and a widespread fear of panic and disaster prevails among the people. The continued reduction of the currency, followed by a corresponding reduction in all values, to that extent diminishes the capacity of the people to pay their indebtedness contracted at a time when the currency was much more inflated than at present and gold at a much higher premium.

If last year pork was twelve dollars a hundred and this year it is six, it is manifest that the capacity of the farmer to pay is diminished just one half, while the volume of the principal and interest of the public debt, and of his own private indebtedness has not diminished, but remains the same. Cast iron theories of finance which do not yield to the circumstances of the the times, are very apt to be broken by a crash, and it is the part of wisdom to make the theory, however wise in general, submit to the temporary condition of the people. The unsettled and impoverished condition of the people of the South, the failure of the cotton crop, the successive failure of two wheat crops in the North, render the situation of the country quite peculiar and critical, and makes it unsafe, in my opinion, to push the further reduction of the currency at this time.

Should the General Assembly concur in these views, it would be entirely proper to present them to their Senators and Representatives in Congress.

RECONSTRUCTION AND CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The people of the North have not been animated by a spirit of resentment and revenge in their dealings with the South since the conclusion of the rebellion. On the contrary, they have earnestly hoped that the people of the South would kindly and sincerely accept the situation, and co-operate with them in the settlement of our national difficulties upon a permanent basis; and had the Southern people met them in this spirit, adjusted their Constitutions and laws to the new order of things, rendered justice and given equal protection to all her citizens, confiscation, disfranchisement and punishment would scarcely have been demanded. When, upon the surrender of Lee's army, General Grant gave absolution to the Confederate officers and soldiers, upon the sole condition of not again bearing arms against the Republic, the nation acquiesced in his conduct almost without a murmur, and when all the rebel forces laid down their arms, and the war was at an end, the misfortunes of the South, the fallen and prostrate condition of the people inspired in the North feelings amounting almost to compassion and forgiveness. At the time the South declared full submission, asked for lenient terms, but claimed no rights and dictated no conditions. But since then the temper of her people seems to have undergone a radical change. They have passed from submission to defiance, and the mercy which was extended to them has been requited in bloody persecutions upon the Union men and negro population in their midst. Their course has had its natural and inevitable effect upon the public mind of the North, which is rapidly passing from mercy and forgiveness to the stern demands of justice, and the exaction of the penalties for treason. The logic of events against which the arguments of the statesman weigh not, moulds the public mind and sweeps it on rapidly from confusion to conclusion. The impossible of yesterday is the possible of to-day, and the radicalism of to-day becomes the conservatism of to-morrow.

The patriotic and loyal members of Congress who voted for the "Winter Davis" bill in 1864, would stand aghast before it as a scheme of reconstruction in 1866. It was then thought the wisest thing to be done, but we can now see, in the light of two years' experience, how fatal it would have been to the nation. It was manifest, from the beginning, that no scheme of reconstruction could be or ought to be accepted by the people of the North, which did not involve the equalizing of representation in Congress and the Electoral College. The people of the North could not consent, honorably to themselves, nor without a disregard to the principles of Republican government, that those lately in rebellion should return to their places in the Government, and retain, in perpetuity, the right to represent four millions of colored people, whom they deprive of all political rights, which would give to them after 1870 at least thirty votes in the Electoral College and in the House of Representatives. Should the Southern States be permitted to return without the rectification of this great wrong, it would constitute a source of constantly increasing dissatisfaction in the North, would be regarded as an intolerable burden, and would dangerously threaten the future peace of the country.

I have received from the Secretary of State of the United States, an official copy of a joint resolution passed by Congress at the late session, two-thirds of each House concurring, proposing to the States an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which I herewith submit to your consideration.

The first clause of the Amendment establishes the great fact that all persons born in the United States are subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and of the State wherein they reside, and that no State shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, or deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, or deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

The second clause establishes equality of representation in the lower House of Congress, and in the Electoral College, by excluding from the basis of representation any race or class of people who are deprived of the right of suffrage, and thus takes away from all the States the right to have representation for the colored people in their midst, unless they first give to them the right of suffrage. It proceeds upon the principle that white people do not have their political rights enlarged by reason of having in their midst a colored population whom they deprive of all political rights; upon the principle that people who are not good enough to have representation for themselves are not good enough to give it to others; upon the principle that people who are not qualified to vote themselves are not qualified to duplicate the voting power of others.

The third clause declares ineligible to any National or State office any person who, having once taken an official oath to support the Constitution of the United States, afterwards committed perjury by going into the rebellion. This will tend to make treason odious by excluding from office the perjured politicians and political paupers who brought on the war.

The fourth clause declares the validity of the public debt, forever forbids the assumption or payment of the rebel debt, and prohibits the payment of any claim for the loss or emancipation of slaves. The four clauses constitute one amendment, which was submitted to the people of Indiana for their approval or rejection at the late election.

It establishes the great principle of national unity and citizenship, equality of representation, disability for treason, the good faith of the nation to her creditors, and guards the nation in future times against the corruptions of the rebel debt. It is of inestimable value to the country, and can not be safely substituted by mere legislation which is liable to repeal or destruction at the hands of the Supreme Court.

The cardinal principles of reconstruction should be planted in the Constitution, whence they can be uprooted only by the same process by which they were established. No public measure was ever more fully discussed before the people, better understood by them, or received a more distinct and intelligent approval. I will enter into no argument in its behalf before this General Assembly. Every member of it understands it, and is prepared, I doubt not, to give his vote for or against, on the question of ratification. I venture, however, to recommend that you give to it your speedy consideration, and hope that its ratification will soon be published to the world as a declaration of the spirit and purpose of the people of Indiana.

But what if the Southern people reject the amendment? But what if they continue this reign of terror, this flagrant disregard of liberty and life? Do they imagine that the North will recede, or that affairs will be allowed to remain as they are? These things are impossible. A quarter of a million of lives have been lost, billions of money wasted, the tears of the widow and orphan are flowing, the shrieks of the murdered freedmen are heard, Union men are flying for their lives, and now the blood of the nation is up, and the cry for vengeance is abroad in the land. Let the people of the South flee from the wrath to come. Let them put away the perjured traitors who hurried them into rebellion, and now darken their counsels, and make haste to abandon their sins, and accept the proffered terms.

The Constitutional provision declaring that the United States shall guarantee to each State a republican form of government, was not intended to furnish merely a paper guaranty, but authorized the Government of the United States to interfere in a certain contingency, with the government of a State. The guaranty is to be made by the United States, that is, by the Government of the United States, which is not the President or Congress, but both together, and must, therefore, be a legislative act.

The President could not establish a State Government and accept it finally as loyal and republican in its form, and legal and complete in its structure without assuming that he is the Government of the United States, which would manifestly be absurd.

What the extent of this power is has never been settled by any precedent; and has not been defined by Kent, Story, or any of our writers on Constitutional law. It is a vast undefined power, given to the United States to guard the States against revolution, anarchy or change to monarchical or aristocratic government. If a State government has been destroyed by rebellion, the United States must set up or re-establish a republican form of government. If a State government should be converted into an aristocracy the United States must restore it to a republican form. How, or in what manner this shall be done is not marked out by the Constitution, and must, therefore, as far as we can judge, depend upon the circumstances of each case.

The government is armed with supervisory power to keep the States in their orbits by maintaining within them republican governments, and the measure of power must, therefore, be the extent of the means necessary to accomplish the purpose.

It is a well recognized principle of Constitutional law, that where a duty is enjoined, all the powers necessary to the performance of the duty are included.

Where a certain demand is made by the Constitution the means necessary to produce the result must be inferred, else the demand would be nugatory.

The only measure, therefore, we can give to this power is that it embraces whatever may be truly necessary to guarantee to each State a republican form of government. If a State government falls into anarchy the United States must re-establish it upon a republican basis, and must be held to have the right to employ whatever instrumentalities are necessary for that purpose.

Ordinarily, and when the country is in a normal condition, the subject of suffrage is in the control absolutely of the several States, and has been so treated from the first formation of the Government, and may be regarded clearly as one of the reserved rights of the States. But, if a State government shall fall into anarchy, or be destroyed by rebellion, and it is found clearly and unmistakably, that a loyal new one can not be erected and successfully maintained without conferring upon a race or body of men the right of suffrage, to whom it has been denied by the laws of the State, it would clearly be within the power of Congress to confer it for that purpose, upon the principle that it can employ the means necessary to the performance of a required duty.

Not that Congress could make a Constitution for a State, in which the right of suffrage should be fixed, but that it could call a Convention to form a new Constitution and establish a new government, and prescribe the qualifications of those who should vote for the members of that convention and participate in the organization of the new government.

The power which I claim for Congress is vast and dangerous, and should be exercised with deliberation, and only in case of clear necessity, as it trenches directly upon the general theory and structure of the Government, yet it unquestionably exists.

If, when other remedies have failed, it be the clear and deliberate judgment of Congress that loyal Republican State governments can not be maintained except by conferring the elective franchise upon the negro race in those States, Congress may confer it upon the ground that it is necessary to the performance of a prescribed duty. In this view it is not necessary to regard the rebel States as Territories, as the constitutional provision applies, in express terms, to States.

As a practical question it cannot be supposed that four millions of free colored people can for a great time be kept in a state of political vassalage and denied their voice in the government by which they are controlled, and which they help to support. As a political question, our Republican theory, which asserts that "governments exist only by the consent of the governed," and that "taxation and representation" should go together, does not admit that suffrage shall be limited by race, cast, or color. As a question of natural right, it is hard to say that suffrage is not a natural right, when upon its exercise may depend the possession and enjoyment of all other acknowledged natural rights. It is hard to say that a man has a right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, and yet has no natural right to a voice in that government by which these other rights will be protected or denied. But as all other natural rights are subject to restriction and limitation for the general welfare of society, this should be no exception to the rule. The proposition at once to introduce to the ballot-box half a million of men, who but yesterday were slaves, the great mass of whom are profoundly ignorant, and all impressed with that character which slavery impresses upon its victims, is repugnant to the feelings of a large part of our people, and would only be justified by necessity resulting from inability to maintain loyal republican State governments without them.

But the necessity for loyal Republican State Governments that shall protect men of all races, classes and opinions, and shall render allegiance and support to the Government of the United States, must override every other consideration of prejudice or policy.

If it be found necessary not to accept the present State Governments in the South, and to exercise the great power which has hitherto lain dormant in the Constitution, the people of the South will have the consolation of knowing that it is their own act and deed. By the unrestrained slaughters of Memphis and New Orleans; by the unpunished murder of loyal men; by the persecution and exile of those who adhered to the Union; by the contemptuous rejection of the generous terms that were offered, they are fast proving that the extraordinary powers of the Constitution must be summoned to cure the evils under which the land is laboring.

Let them take warning, and speedily reform their ways before they have driven the Nation to a point where theory, passion and prejudice must all give way to the stern necessity of establishing new governments that will protect all men in equal enjoyment of life, liberty and property.

But come what will, the Nation will live, and its unity and power be established.

Throughout the late conflict, we discerned the hand of God leading the Nation through blood, to a purer morality and clearer perception of the rights of men, and cannot doubt that in His own time, and by His chosen means, He will conduct it safely through this sea of troubles to a fraternal peace, unstained by oppression, unbroken by rebellion, and crowned with the choicest blessings ever vouchsafed to any people.

COMMISSIONERS' REPORT.

To the General Assembly of the State of Indiana:

In compliance with the requirements of the laws of our State, we hereby submit to your honorable body the annual report of the "Indiana Hospital for the Insane," for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1866.

Statistics setting forth the number of insane persons received and discharged, together with the results of their treatment, will be found in the report of the Superintendent, herewith transmitted, which sets forth sundry other matters, pertaining to the Institution, of interest and importance. For this report we would respectfully ask a careful reading on the part of the members of the Legislature, and the friends of the Institution in general.

There has been no change among the resident officers of the Hospital during the year, and we take pleasure in making mention of the good conduct of each and all of them in the discharge of their several official duties.

We are satisfied that at no previous time in the history of the Institution, have its inmates been better cared for, either morally or physically. Nothing in the way of food, pure air, medicine, or sanitary regulations, which the resources at our command would supply, has been spared. The results are very creditable to our Superintendent, Dr. W. Lockhart, whose zeal in his specialty, has been commendable, and whose labors have been untiring.

Many parts of the center buildings, the entire heating apparatus, with the greater number of the water closets, have been, for several years, badly out of repair. But little repairing has been done in the house since its erection, some fifteen years ago. At the time of making our last report to the Legislature, it was getting so badly out of order as to render it almost unfit for further use. The late Superintendent, Dr. James H. Woodburn, in his annual report, made to the Commissioners two years since, estimated the amount necessary to make the required repairs, and for erecting buildings for kitchen, laundry, sewing-room and chapel, at $44,000. The result has shown this calculation, in the aggregate, to have been remarkably accurate. Failing to get the full appropriations recommended on that occasion, we have endeavored, by a rigid economy, to divert enough from the appropriations for current expenses, to put the buildings in good order. This we have found no small undertaking, as the items in the report of the Superintendent clearly indicate. The amount drawn from the current expense fund for the last two years, for these repairs, and for several much needed improvements, as the airing courts, and so-forth, has been $14,546 01. In addition to this sum, we have expended of the special appropriation $26,500, "to build a center back building, and for other repairs," $6,500, making the aggregate expenditure for repairs, from both appropriations, $21,046 01. These improvements have added much to the healthfulness, comfort, and utility of the house.

Of the above named special appropriation, the sum of $18,740 45 has been expended on the back center building, designed for bakery, laundry, chapel, and sewing room; the balance, $1,259 55, remaining in the treasury. The main part of the work on this building was held back till this year, in the expectation of a decline in prices. In this the Board has been disappointed, as the cost of labor and materials has remained about the same. The building is, so far, substantially constructed. It will require $5,000 more for its completion. According to the estimate of the Architect, when finished, it will have cost $23,740 45. By reference to the reports of former officers of the Institution, it will be seen that this price is much less than has been estimated at any time heretofore. The completion of this edifice will supply a want felt by the Institution ever since the erection of the south wing, ten or twelve years ago.

"An Act" was passed at the extra session of the last Legislature, "to provide for the care and treatment of the Incurable Insane." By this Act, the sum of $35,000 was appropriated to erect suitable buildings for that purpose. This appropriation was placed at the disposal of a Special Board, consisting of the Governor and Treasurer of the State of Indiana, and the Board of Commissioners of the Hospital for the Insane. After consultation among the several members of this Special Board, it was thought prudent to procure the opinion of the Attorney General as to the legality of applying this appropriation toward the construction of the north wing of the Hospital, in accordance with its original design. Having secured from that officer an opinion favorable to that mode of expenditure, the Board has proceeded with the proposed building, with as little delay as possible. The necessary excavations have been made and the foundation completed, only about one-half of the appropriation having yet been expended. We found, that at comparatively small cost, the capacity of this addition to the Hospital could be considerably increased above that of the corresponding south wing, (built some twelve years since,) without altering materially the original plan. This could be accomplished by widening several parts of the building, so as to admit of an additional tier of rooms, with the same number of main walls, and by carrying some portions of it a story higher. A good stone cellar, also, being calculated to render the wards of the lower story of the contemplated building quite as useful as any other part of it, while the corresponding wards in the present structure are almost entirely useless. Indeed, the apartments known as the basement wards, (occupied by violent and chronic cases,) although much improved within the last year; are badly lighted and poorly ventilated, and in no way creditable to the State as a charity, or to the Institution.

When the north wing, as commenced, shall have been completed, it will afford room for two hundred and twenty additional patients. The capacity of the Hospital will be increased thereby to between five or six hundred, or almost double what it is at present. If then one-third or more of the inmates should be chronically affected, the whole could be taken care of by the present corps of officers, which would be accomplished at quite a saving above the amount required to establish and conduct a separate institution for the benefit of the incurably insane.

To complete this building will require a considerable expenditure of money; but we trust your honorable body will not hesitate to make the necessary appropriations for an object so important. Indiana is far behind almost all the northern States in making provision for her insane. Nothing has been done in the way of increasing her facilities for that purpose for more than ten years. During this time our population has increased largely, and the causes of insanity have been more and more prevalent. There is probably now double the number of this unfortunate class in our State that there was in the year 1856, when the present buildings were finished, and it was found that there was not even then room enough for nearly all the applicants for admission.

Within this period, several of our neighboring sister States have made extensive additions to their Institutions for the Insane, or have built new ones. Shall Indiana, whose proud record in our late struggle for nationality will ever fill a bright page in the history of our country, be last among the States in her charities? Shall her Insane run at large, houseless and homeless wanderers, a pest and a terror to community, or be confined in jails and poor houses, to associate with felons and the off-casts of society? We appeal to the sense of justice, and the honest State pride of this Legislature, earnestly desiring a due consideration of the facts, and a favorable response to our demands on behalf of humanity.

We have procured from our Architect, Joseph Curzon, carefully prepared estimates, in detail, of the amount needed to finish the north wing as at present designed, according to which it will require $153,000. These estimates were made on the scale of prices for the year now closing, and are ample for its completion. If, for the next two years, prices should decline, of which there are, at present, indications, we are of the opinion that the building can be completed and furnished with the amount estimated. We would therefore suggest to your honorable body the propriety of making the appropriation (if made by you) for the double purpose of completing and furnishing the north wing of the Hospital. If this be done, in all probability the building can be occupied before another biennial session of the Legislature. The south wing, (which was built from 1853 to 1855, inclusive,) cost the State between eighty and one hundred thousand dollars. This building was without a stone foundation or cellar, and, in other respects, of less than two-thirds the size of the proposed addition. At the time referred to, building materials and labor cost only about one-half what they do at present. Still our estimate for erecting and furnishing the north wing with better materials, and fifty per cent. more capacity, is only about double the actual cost of the south wing twelve years ago.

The aggregate of the disbursements for current expenses of the Hospital for the year now closing, is.....		$59,339 84

Average daily number in Hospital.....	290

It will be seen by an analysis of the records of the Institution, that for a period of four years, ending with the year 1856, the cost of keeping patients was then only about twenty-five per cent. less than during the past year. This should satisfy the friends of the Institution that there has been no want of economy in the administration of its affairs.

To complete the Hospital buildings and place it on an equality with the Institutions of other States, and to meet the current expenses of the next two years, the following is our estimate of the necessary appropriations:

The time for which appropriations for current expenses were made by the last Legislature, will have expired on the first of January, 1867. From that time forward the Institution will be wholly without means of support. For this it will be necessary for your honorable body to make immediate provision. To conduct the Hospital for one quarter will require $15,000. Either this sum should be appropriated without delay, or the appropriations for current expenses for the next two years should be made as early as practicable. Unless one or the other is done promptly, the Institution will be seriously embarrassed during the winter months, when its demands are heavier and more urgent than at any other time of the year.

The farm and garden, under the faithful superintendence of Wm. M. French, the Steward, have been quite as productive as usual. The work necessary for their cultivation has been performed mostly by the patients, many of whom are good laborers, and pleased with the opportunity of exercising in the open air. We have reason to believe that out-door labor is often very important to those in our charge, as a means of restoration to health, and therefore regard the possession of the excellent tract of land, attached to the Hospital, as very fortunate.

Conscious of having labored faithfully, according to our best judgment, for the good of the important charge committed to us by you, we invite a just and rigid scrutiny of our official conduct. Finally, we ask an impartial consideration of the matters set forth in this report, hoping for the adoption of some plan or system by which ample provision shall be made for the care and treatment of all the Insane within the borders of our State—hopeless maniacs, as well as the victims of temporary mental aberration.

Very respectfully,

ANDREW WALLACE, President.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

To the Board of Commissioners:

In compliance with the law governing the Hospital for the Insane, the Eighteenth Annual Report is herewith submitted.

Another year of labor, care, and anxiety has closed, with thanks to the Giver of all Good for the many blessings enjoyed, and the measure of success—of usefulness attained.

In consideration of the proximity of that most dreaded of all pestilences—Asiatic Cholera—it is with no ordinary degree of satisfaction and gratefulness that we record “no epidemic disease has visited us during the year.” Thorough and well executed sanitary measures have been enforced, for the prevention of that disease, which have contributed, doubtless, to the general health enjoyed.

We are the more gratified with the degree of health preserved, when we take into consideration the great number of patients necessarily crowded into the Hospital during the hottest of the summer months.

At the close of the last fiscal year, we had remaining in the Institution 127 males and 135 females, making a total of 262.

During the year we admitted 133 males and 108 females.

The whole number of patients, therefore, under treatment, during the year, was 260 males and 243 females, making a total of 503.

Discharged cured, during the year, 69 males and 54 females. Total 123. Improved, 16 males and 12 females. Unimproved, 24 males and 28 females. Died, 14 males and 9 females. Total discharged, 230. Remaining in the Hospital at the end of the year 133 males and 140 females, making a total of 273.

The greatest number in the Hospital at any one time was from June 29 to June 30, when there were 324. The smallest number during the year was from Nov. 1 to Nov. 2, when there were 261. The smallest number of males 127, the smallest number of females 134. The greatest number of males 167, the greatest number of females 155. Whole number of applications for admission during the year, 334. Summer capacity of Hospital, 280.

For the most part of the year, the Hospital has been crowded beyond its real capacity, filling even the day rooms with beds, and, of course, we have admitted none but recent cases. As, during the last fiscal year, we found it necessary to discharge the patients who had resided longest in the Hospital, or those apparently the least hopeful, to make room for recent cases. This method of conducting the Institution, when fully carried out, adds considerably to its expense and care. Recent and excitable cases of insanity destroy wearing apparel, beds, and bedding; besides, we must incur for them additional expenditures for remedial (medicinal) agents, and watch their effects from day to day, and from hour to hour. Chronic cases do not need such careful scrutiny, and require comparatively little treatment.

THE RESTORED.

We have, however, as a reward for our cares and expenditures, one hundred and twenty-three patients restored to society during the year. Sixteen more than for any other fiscal year for the Hospital, and twenty-one more than for some of the years when the Hospital capacity was the same as at present.

The large per centage of cures reported at this Hospital, as compared with Asylums, is attributable to the class of cases treated.

This is the only Institution of the kind within the State. The law governing it specifies that no chronic case shall be admitted when applications for recent cases are on file. The statute fixes the period of chronicity at one year. It is also a part of the statute requirement that the chronic be discharged to make room for the acute cases.

We have, therefore, for treatment only the recent, and, of course, more curable of that unfortunate class of our fellow citizens.

AIRING COURTS.

The labor and watchfulness necessary in the management of the excited and more violent male patients has been much lessened, and their health greatly benefitted, by allowing them the freedom of an airing court, (built by your advice and direction) to the west of and adjoining the north wing of the Hospital. The moral effect of the liberty thus given this class of patients, was marked indeed. When, as formerly, they were pent up in the ward, they would break out window lights and window sash, unless the shutters were closed, which rendered the ward dark and the men restive. When thus confined, they ran from place to place, too often resisting all that opposed. Now, when they have enjoyed the freedom of the airing court, the outside windows, and the lattice doors, shutting them away from the end windows of the hall, may all be opened, and the men allowed to gaze upon the fields and flowers, and see nature in all her moods, as well as the active movements of the industrious builders about them; and we have, as a result, comparative gentleness and quietude in the place of restlessness and ferocity, as well as health conserved for all.

LABOR PERFORMED.

The airing court has often been useful to us in taking care of the men during the working hours, by aggregating two or three wards of the least useful as laborers, under the charge of a less number of attendants, while the more manageable of the men were laboring. Thus a larger amount of labor than usual has been performed on the farm, in the garden, cleaning old brick, hacking new brick, stacking lumber, scoring, hewing, raising and bridging joists, raising frames and other material, by derrick and otherwise, for center kitchen, work on airing court, &c.

ILL HEALTH.

The ill health, so often recorded on admitting patients to the Hospital, is too often continuous. Indigestion and Anemia, with our insane, are general, if not quite universal. Hereditary and climatic (malarious) influences, ignorance of, or disregard for the laws of health, as the use of improper food, or the abuse of articles in themselves wholesome; excessive toil, or the want of exercise; intemperance, with its long catalogue of ills, physical, moral, mental, and loss of sleep, whether from domestic affliction or discord; a restless desire for gain, or the multitudinous excesses and indulgences of the young and the vicious, seeking for pleasure where it never has been found; or from whatever other cause "nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep," is wanting—these all play their part in making up the sum total of diseased bodies and diseased brains. No cases, however, are so lamentable as those of the young, who have exhausted body and mind in rounds of senseless pleasure—the late, highly seasoned, needless suppers—the convivial glass, the white-heat of excitement at the play and the gaming table; the midnight revel; the feverish, salacious dreams, and yet more salacious indulgences, until at last life is exhaled, and the miserable wretch lingers for a few months in an Asylum, demented, and death closes the scene.

Possessing noble forms and godlike understandings, brought up amid benign influences, the heart bleeds at beholding such exhibitions of woe and degradation. Yet every year brings its fresh installment of victims.

GOVERNMENT.

The law of kindness is now, and has been for many years, acknowledged as the true one for the management of the insane. If found sometimes impracticable, it is yet always the ideal toward which our every day efforts are directed, although it may, and often does, tax one's patience and ingenuity much. During my connection with the Institution, no feature of its management not excepting its hygiene, nor the administration of medicines, has given me so much care and anxiety as this. I think I may say, in truth, that the attendants have generally discharged this duty with humanity and fidelity. Chains are never used for restraining the excited. There are no cells nor dungeons in this Hospital. The management of the excited insane is attended with much labor and perplexity. It is the control of a strong man or woman, whom phrenzy has made desperate, every muscle of whose body is wrought up to the highest degree of excitement. When homicidal propensities are superadded to this condition, as often occurs, the insane desire to kill is only equalled by that of a wild beast in ferocity, with greater intelligence and ability to destroy. The watchfulness and care necessary to properly restrain such a case is very great, aside from the administration of food and appropriate remedial agents. Yet this class of cases more generally recover than the melancholic.

Of the 1730 patients admitted as maniacal (excited), 958 have recovered, or 55 37-100 per cent.

Of the 1321 patients admitted as melancholic, 594 have recovered, or 44 96-000 per cent.

The management of the melancholic insane has also its obstacles. The suicidal are more generally of this class, and when they have been, by regular and systematic methods, prevented from committing such an act, by hanging, drowning, or by cutting or explosive agencies, they often resort to starvation as a means of ending life. If food be artificially introduced into the stomach, they regurgitate or vomit it, and the same of remedial agents. Every effort at a knowledge of their physical or mental condition, by examination or by inquiries, is repelled by silent contempt or disdain. They seem to have entered, without expectation or desire of return, despair's drear abode, where hope lies buried. Pope's well known line, "Hope springs eternal in the human breast," seems a misnomer when applied to the melancholy insane. They seem utterly without hope. All day long they brood over some real or imaginary sorrow or grievance, and retire at night to brood again, and not to sleep. If the night watch supposes that because they are quiet they are sleeping, he is mistaken. Thinking, thinking; a morbid, endless chain of reverie, from which no thought is omitted that can "minister to a mind diseased." Every one accustomed to treat disease, knows how valuable an element hope is in its management, and how much the chances of recovery are lessened when it is wanting. Cheerful company, amusements, exercise, bathing, alterants, and agents that promote sleep, promise most for this class of cases.

BASEMENT DORMITORY.

The completion of the Suicidal Dormitory for males, is a source of gratification, as supplying a need long felt in the Hospital. Aside from this, there is no place for males where suicide by hanging is impossible, although all the wards, dormitories, &c., are, in the main, adapted to the wants of this class of patients.

VENTILLATION.

It is well known to yourselves, but perhaps not to the public, that this Hospital is defective in more respects than want of room. At the time of the erection of the center building, north and south wings, &c., (nearly twenty years ago) the system of ventilation adopted was defective in many respects.

First. The flues (outlets from the rooms) within the walls are too small; many of them being closed from accumulations of mortar during the erection of the building.

Secondly. The upper iron sash is stationary, and filled with window panes.

Thirdly. The transoms on either side of the hall are not arranged opposite one another, and if they had been, currents of air could not have passed through the rooms when the doors of the rooms are closed, as they must be at night. Larger flues ought to be constructed, the window lights removed from the fixed sash to a moveable one, and shutters adjusted to the windows as a preventive of suicide, by hanging, and to prevent elopements.

When the rooms are closed at night, the atmosphere within the rooms and the halls is very impure. To make these two wings of the old building (more than half the present capacity of the Hospital) what they ought to be for the health of their inmates, these alterations ought to be made, and forced ventilation employed additional. These improvements, with forced ventilation for the south wing also, would make this Hospital the equal of similar institutions, in design, elsewhere.

There is no one need of the Hospital so much felt by those who live within it, as forced ventilation, without which no institution of the kind is now considered complete. The peculiar acid perspiration, the filthy habits of the demented, the necessity for privies within or near to the wards, the crowding together, especially at night, of so many persons, all having foul breaths, all more or less diseased, may be mentioned as some of the arguments in favor of forced ventilation.

EXERCISE.

Manual labor exerts a valuable curative influence over the insane. In his report for 1865, Dr. Pliny Earle, the eminent Superintendent of the Northampton (Massachusetts) Hospital for the Insane, writes: "Labor requires and gives exercise, the great prerequisite and conservator of bodily health, in both the sane and the insane. It gives, like a safety valve to steam, harmless escape to unnatural excitement. It invigorates digestion, stimulates all the vital organs to a wholesome performance of their functions, and produces sleep, that universal necessity to health. It recalls the mind from its vagrancies, and concentrates it more or less upon a rational subject. Every moment of such abstraction and concentration is a point gained, and although these moments may, at first, be rare and few, yet, in many cases, by the force of habit, or of will, or of returning bodily health, or of all combined, they become more and more frequent and numerous, until reason gains the victory over unreason." This high estimate of labor, as a means of restoring the insane, accords with and is confirmed by observation here.

that require physical exertion, for those who have not been accustomed to labor, are also invaluable. Dancing and gymnastics may be mentioned as having proved eminently useful in this way. We have also bagatelle and many other games, and hope to add billiards and bowling-alleys during the coming year. We have donations to the Hospital sufficient to fit up room, veranda, &c., in chapel for magic-lantern entertainments, as well as to purchase instruments, pictures, &c., when the new chapel is otherwise finished and furnished.

LIBRARY.

The Library, to which we have made some additions during the year, continues to be a source of pleasure and profit to a large number of our patients.

CHAPEL.

The exercises at the chapel have been regularly maintained, affording spiritual consolation to the patients, of whom there are always as many as our small chapel will accommodate, who are, in the main, attentive, and even appreciative listeners; besides, these exercises contribute in no small degree to the discipline of the house.

RECREATION.

Walking during the forenoons and afternoons, when the weather is favorable, for all the more intelligent and trustworthy patients, when they are well enough, is regularly required. The more unmanageable and dangerous patients are meantime sent to the airing courts, so that all may enjoy the benefits arising from out-door life. Formerly this was impracticable, many patients remaining within the walls of the building for a series of years. Another good arising from the airing courts is the improved atmosphere of the halls during the absence of the class of patients requiring the restraint of an enclosure.

CARPENTER'S SHOP.

For some years a part of the basement of the south wing has been used as a carpenter's shop. We need a building for this purpose elsewhere:

First. Because of the danger of fire; the presence of highly inflammable materials (shavings) rendering so much life and property unsafe, if not hazardous.

Second. We need it from considerations of economy; the carpenter having to quit his labor at an early hour, especially in winter, the shop being too dark to work in without a light, which can not be allowed on account of its danger.

BOILER FURNACES.

The Carpenter's Patent Furnaces in use for the last twelve years, (five in number), are undergoing an entire change, found necessary from much wear and tear, and from imperfect draft. A given amount of fuel smouldering away, or burning slowly, does not generate as much steam as when the blaze from the same amount of fuel licks the boilers along their whole course. Opening wide the damper, the draft of the furnace adopted (Thomas H. Clark's Patent) may be made to carry the blaze through the boiler flues into the breeching connecting the furnace with the smoke-stack. One of the new furnaces is now in use and gives most satisfactory results. We calculate this furnace will save the institution $500 in fuel this year. We shall need an appropriation of $500 to cover the deficit necessary to be expended.

CLOTHING.

The law made and provided for furnishing patients with clothing on admission to the Hospital, (Gavin & Hord, vol. 1, p. 382, § 18), is as follows:

"For a female patient, two strong gowns, two flannel petticoats, two pairs of woollen stockings, one pair of shoes, two handkerchiefs, at least two chemises, and a large warm shawl or cloak. The clothing shall be new, or as good as new, the woollen of a dark color, and shall be delivered in good order."

The law ought to be amended as follows: After the words "two strong gowns, two flannel petticoats," and before the words "two pairs stockings," insert the words "two night gowns," "two quilted skirts"—an addition to the clothing of female patients much needed, not only for their comfort but for their health.

LAW GOVERNING DISCHARGE OF PATIENTS—(Gavin & Hord, vol. 1, p. 384, § 25.)

STATE OF INDIANA, }
 — County. } ss.

To the Sheriff of — County, greeting:

WHEREAS, The proper authority has directed that — —, a patient in the Indiana Hospital for the Insane from this county, be removed from said Hospital, you are, therefore, hereby commanded forthwith to remove said patient and return him to —, in this county, whence he was taken to the Hospital.

Witness my hand and the seal of the — Circuit Court, this — day of —, A. D. —.

— —, Clerk.

Immediately upon receiving said warrant it shall be the duty of the Sheriff, by himself or deputy, forthwith to execute the same and return it to the Clerk by whom it was issued; and if any Clerk, upon receiving such notice, shall refuse or neglect, for the space of five days, to issue and place such warrant in the hands of the Sheriff, or if such Sheriff shall refuse to receive the same or neglect, for the space of twenty days after receiving the warrant, to demand such patient of the Superintendent, the expense of the patient shall, from the date of the notice to the Clerk until his removal, be charged at the rate of two dollars per week against the person so offending; and the amount may be recovered in an action, with the cost of suit, in the name of the Superintendent, against the Clerk or Sheriff so offending: Provided, however, That it shall in no case be necessary for the Superintendent to give such notice to the Clerk when the friends of such discharged patient are ready and willing to remove him; but such patient shall be at once intrusted to their care.

I recommend that the law be amended as follows: Insert after the words "be charged at the rate of," and before the words "per week against the person so offending," "four dollars," instead of the words "two dollars," so as to make this part of the section read "be charged at the rate of four dollars per week against the person so offending," otherwise there will be a disregard for the law, as has occurred heretofore—two dollars per week being a small sum to pay for board of patients. I recommend, also, that the proviso be stricken from the clause, for the reason that it destroys the efficiency of the law, on account of the delays occurring from the loose construction placed upon the words "ready" and "willing," and because it frequently happens that the friends of patients are "ready and willing" to remove them from the Hospital when the safety of society requires that they be discharged to the proper county authorities and placed either within the county house or the county jail.

CENTER KITCHEN.

As was expected at the time of writing my last report, the building for center kitchen, wash house, bakery, sewing room, and chapel had its foundation completed before the working season closed. One hundred thousand of the new brick were upon the ground, besides two hundred thousand of the brick from the old building removed. A contract for the brick necessary to finish the building was made at $10.50 per thousand, delivered; but proving dissatisfactory because of bad quality of brick, the contract was annulled, and a contract made with Mr. J. W. Knight for one hundred thousand brick at $10.10, delivered, which proved entirely satisfactory. Mr. J. P. Cruse having been the lowest bidder for laying the brick, contracting at $4.65 per thousand, he furnishing lime and sand and necessary labor, the work was commenced early in the season, but was delayed somewhat for want of sawed lumber for joist, the parties (Messrs. Hill & Wingate) not having the material in the city as promptly as could have been desired. The carpenter work has been done by the day. The regularity of the work, setting and bridging the joist for the different stories, being interrupted by the want of joist and necessary completion of connecting brick walls. A contract, when the lumber was not at hand, was not thought advisable; besides there was much help in the house in the way of scoring, hewing, putting up and bridging the joist. Just the amount of labor performed in this way I have no means of estimating, but I calculate that at least one thousand dollars have been saved the institution by labor from within the house, hauling material from the city, &c. The contracts for door and window frames, sash, &c., slating, guttering and plastering, have all been made, after due public notice before receiving sealed proposals. The work on the building now draws rapidly near completion, and we hope soon to have the use of a part, if not all of it, before the setting in of winter. The cellar is now in use and doing valuable service as a storehouse for various products. The cost of the building, so far, is..... $18,740 45

NORTH WING.

For ten consecutive years, my predecessors have urged the necessity for the completion of the north wing of the Hospital. Brought in immediate relationship with so much suffering, and realizing the sad want of adequate room for its relief, it is the dictate of a common humanity to repeat the necessity for it, and urge its speedy completion. From various sources of information,

I estimate the number of insane, within the State, at more than sixteen hundred.

If our noble and genesous State would preserve her reputation for liberality and philanthropy—if she would keep pace with her sister States in this her greatest charity, she must not only complete this central Hospital, but build an additional one in each of the four quarters of the State. Such an increase of Hospital capacity is required to meet the present wants of all our insane, besides the yearly increase of insanity, as populations increase.

The following tabular statement exhibits the want of capacity within this Hospital:

Number of applications for admission during 17th fiscal year..	267
Number admitted.....	189
Number refused admission.....	78
Number discharged improved.....	40
Number discharged unimproved.....	44
Number of patients refused and discharged improved and unimproved.....	162
Number of applications for admission during 18th fiscal year	334
Number admitted.....	241
Number refused admission.....	93
Number discharged improved.....	28
Number discharged unimproved.....	52
Number refused and discharged improved and unimproved..	173
Whole number refused admission and discharged improved and unimproved during the two last fiscal years.....	335
Number now in Hospital.....	277
Whole number in Hospital, refused, discharged improved and unimproved during the last two fiscal years.....	612

The improved and unimproved discharged during the two fiscal years, would surely become a burden and a tax to society wherever they might go, and ought to have remained within the Hospital. All the Middle and Western, to say nothing of the Eastern States, have much more ample accommodation for their insane than the State of Indiana. Shall our people be less generous, humane, than those of other States? If the loss of any of the senses, as with the blind, the deaf and dumb, the loss of an arm or leg, appeal to our common humanity, what shall be the measure of our sympathy when all the senses are lost, the noble conceptions of the mind evanished perhaps forever, and the body, so wonderfully and fearfully made, the mere wreck of its former self—the bitter remnant of life being dragged out in wretchedness in jails and county poor houses, or as houseless wanderers, exposed to the inclemency and fury of our winter storms? The Legislature, at its last session, appropriated $35,000 for erecting an Asylum for Chronic Insane. The sum of money appropriated it was thought would complete a building having capacity for perhaps forty patients, a number too inconsiderable to be felt in the State. Taking, therefore, an enlarged and liberal view of the subject, actuated by the wants of the State and the impulses of humanity, (having consulted the Attorney General, Delana R. Williamson, as to its legality, and received his written reply,) your Board, without a dissenting voice, have determined to use as much of the aforesaid building fund as will excavate the ground, erect the stone walls and brick cross-walls, flues and conduits, for the completion of the north wing of the Hospital as originally designed. This was, in my judgment, eminently wise and proper, and I trust that the Legislature, in the exercise of a sound discrimination—viewing the subject from the same liberal and humane stand-point as yourselves, will make the necessary appropriation for the completion of the superstructure. Mr. Joseph Curzon, architect for the south wing and for the other buildings and improvements at the Hospital, was selected for his experience and eminent ability, to take charge of the work. After visiting various eastern, and some western hospitals, and discussing different plans making as much room as possible for the smallest cost—a cardinal point in our calculations—we have adopted, by and with your consent and approval, a plan nearly enough like that of the south wing to preserve the symmetry of the structure as a whole, yet very different in detail. Placing the coils for heating the building in the basement or cellar, we shall have the first floor for patients, 60 in number, (space occupied by coils in the south wing). Continuing what are called the “short halls” to the same number of stories in height as the other halls, that is, making them four stories high instead of three, and lengthening them (17 feet) into separate wards, we get capacity for 36 patients additional. Doubling the so-called "lodges," that is, by projecting another line of rooms on the opposite side of the lodge hall, we have 24 rooms additional, having capacity for 28 patients more, with only the same number of walls, giving capacity in the wing, when completed, for 220 patients. If crowded, (using day rooms as we now do), its capacity would be increased to 260 patients. The south wing accommodates 115 patients — when crowded, 127 patients — making a difference of 105 in capacity, (without very considerably increasing the cost of the building as compared with the south wing), giving us a total capacity for 500 patients, or, by crowding the Hospital as we now do, it may be made to care for 580 patients. For the well-being of the insane, however, I trust it will never be thus crowded.

Sealed proposals, after due public notification, were received, and a contract closed with Messrs. Seibert & Buchanan, the lowest bidders for excavating the ground, at a cost of 29 cents per yard. The work was done as soon as could have been expected, considering the very rainy season encountered, at a cost of $1,898.34.

Mr. J. P. Cruse being the lowest bidder for rubble-stone and brick work, a contract was made (he furnishing materials) for the former at $7.50 per yard, and for the latter at $12.50 per thousand, in the wall. The work is progressing favorably. The usual length of working season will insure its completion, and the whole basis structure will be ready for the superincumbent mass of brick and mortar at an early period next year. The estimate for the cost of the foundation, by the architect, is $19,749. The estimate for the structure, when completed, is $188,000. A tax of three cents on each hundred dollars of assessable property within the State will raise the required sum, viz., $153,000 additional.

We have less amount expended than asked for by Superintendent Dr. J. H. Woodburn.....	$1,194 54

We have also, within this expenditure ($157,805.46), built a bakery, wash house, dormitory for male basement, and two airing courts, and paid an old flour account (1863) of $1,535.77, to John Carlisle.

Making the $164,000 asked for by Supt. Dr. J. H. Woodburn (exclusive of the amount on hand) the basis of calculation, his estimates have proved remarkably correct, as we have verified by a supervision of the work. It would have been a mark of wisdom, too, to have retained, if possible, the amount paid by Gov. O. P. Morton, ($17,415.29) as a balance against which to have drawn after the expiration of the fiscal year just closed, and before further appropriations are made—usually three or four months.

That this sum was designed, however, by the grantors to make up deficiency for building and repairs, and for which we have mainly expended it, is evident from the following statement:

Amount asked for by Supt. Dr. J. H. Woodburn for

I have made this comparative showing of my immediate predecessor's estimates, as an evidence of the necessity for, and the economy of, the expenditures made.

To William C. Kean, of Plainfield, Ind., for patent right to use "Trough," for feeding swine.

To those associated with me in office and in aim—sharing the labors and responsibilities of a grave and important trust, I tender grateful thanks, knowing full well that my meed of praise is idle, compared with the consciousness of having faithfully discharged the sacred duties, for the time being, committed to us.

To you, gentlemen of the Board of Commissioners, I am under renewed obligations for a generous confidence and liberal support, for kind and judicious counsels, and for the untiring vigilance ever exercised for the welfare of this Institution.

Gratified with the unanimity of sentiment and concord of action, characterizing the relations existing between us, hoping for a just and liberal appreciation on the part of our General Assembly of the imperative needs of this great charity, and devoutly trusting in the favor of Him who "openeth his hand and supplieth the desires of every living thing," this report is respectfully submitted.

WILSON LOCKHART,

Superintendent.

Balance at this date as above.....	493,182 72
Showing a reduction of.....	$70,617 38.

The settlements by County Treasurers for collections of State Revenue, School Tax, Sinking Fund Tax, Soldier's Relief Tax and Township Library Tax, have been made without defalcation and with commendable promptness. The delinquent lists have not been larger considering the unusual amount of taxes levied upon the duplicates. The net collections are as follows :

State Revenue—25 cents on the $100, and 75 cents poll.....	$1,321,714 50
School Tax—16 cents on the $100, and 50 cents poll.....	860,963 67
Sinking Fund Tax—10 cents on $100.....	491,769 67
Library Tax—1 cent on the $100.....	46,773 83
Five per cent. of Soldiers' Relief Tax.....	80,225 07

In the above estimate I have designed to state, as nearly as possible, the actual amounts which will be required. I have, however, no means of ascertaining the amount of claims of a military character which were not presented to the Auditing Committee prior to the termination of its existence; and the State Prisons may, by prudent management, be made self-supporting. The reduction in the interest on the Public Debt is based upon the anticipation that at least $1,000,000 of the two and a half per cent. stocks will be redeemed on the first of July next.

The appropriation of $6,000 for Sheriffs' mileage for the year 1866 has been entirely exhausted, and, in view of the great increase of crime, the estimate is made considerably larger for the current year. In this connection I desire to call attention to the necessity of amending the act fixing the distances to be allowed in computing the mileage of Sheriffs to the Southern Prison, and the passage of an act establishing the distances from the various county seats to the Northern Prison. The former act was passed before the present railroad system was in operation, and the distances were computed, in numerous cases, by routes which are now abandoned, and, in consequence, a great injustice is done to the Sheriffs of many counties. Aside from this there are glaring errors in the act; as, for instance, the Sheriff of Vanderburg County is allowed for 150 miles, while the Sheriff of Posey County, who has to travel through Vanderburg County, is allowed for only 143 miles. The truth is, that in neither case is the distance much over half of that actually travelled by the usual route in reaching Jeffersonville.

The want of a fixed table of distances to the Northern Prison is the cause of continual embarrassment in this office, and the attention of the General Assembly has been twice directed to the subject by my predecessors.

The exhaustion of appropriations, which frequently occurs, and the fact that not unfrequently the Legislature has failed to make any appropriations, lead me to suggest the propriety of passing a general law under which the ordinary expenses of the State may be audited and paid. These expenses generally, and especially the fees and salaries of officers, are fixed by law, and consequently the liability to abuse would not be greater, under a general law carrying continuous appropriations, than under the present system of arbitrary biennial appropriations. Estimates for one and two years in advance can, at the best, only approximate correctness, and, in case of deficiency, a serious injury is done to individuals without corresponding benefit or safety to the public interests; and a policy which, by a mere technicality prevents the payment of a just and legal claim when there is an ample amount of money in the Treasury to meet all demands, may be considered of at least doubtful propriety. The passage of an act, carefully guarded and designed to remedy the existing difficulty, would, in my judgment, be a simple act of justice to individual claimants, and not injurious to the public.

The expenses for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1868, are estimated as follows:

Judiciary	$44,000 00
Executive.....	21,500 00
Prosecuting Attorneys.....	7,500 00
Public Printing.....	25,000 00
Fuel and Stationery.....	3,000 00

Increase.....		$156,766,523
Total increase in twenty years.....		$459,218,423

From these statements, and the details exhibited in the tabular statements, Nos. III and IV, attached to this report the following facts are shown :

1st. That the increase of wealth in the State has been gradual, rapid, and without intermission, except during the first three years of the war; that the net increase within the last ten years is more than the entire valuation of 1856, and that the increase in the preceding decade was fully up to the same proportion. However, the value of personal property shows a diminution of over $2,000,000 from 1865 to 1866. This is doubtless occasioned by the fact that a large number of tax payers, construing the law for themselves, failed or refused to list United States Treasury Notes, and, in some instances, National Bank currency.

2d. That the total taxes levied upon the duplicates for 1866, is, in round numbers, $3,000,000.00 less than the amount borne upon the duplicates of 1865, being a reduction of more than the entire taxes levied in the State for the year 1856.

About one-half of this reduction arises from the repeal of the Act for the Relief of Soldiers' Families; but the taxes for county purposes and for the redemption of bonds issued by the counties in payment of bounties and other expenses incurred during the war, show a larger proportional decrease, from the fact that the State, School and Sinking Fund levies are considerably increased.

It is presumed that nearly all the counties will have paid their entire debts before the levies are made for next year, and consequently a still further reduction of local taxes may be anticipated. Taking an entire view of the financial situation and resources of the State, local and general, notwithstanding the fact that the delinquencies of 1866 are returned at $1,389,768.05 against $751,-851.24 returned for 1865, the people of the State may congratulate themselves upon the sound and healthful condition their affairs have reached, and look forward to the early return to a lower rate of taxation than was customary even before the war.

THE PUBLIC DEBT.

The amount of 5 per cent. Stocks outstanding is.....	$5,342,500 00
Of this the State Debt Sinking Fund holds.....	764,482 00
Amount still to be redeemed.....	$4,578,017 00
The amount of 2½ per cent. Stock outstanding is.....	$1,611,389 90
The State Debt Sinking Fund Holds of this.....	96,900 00
Amount still to be redeemed.....	1,514,489 90
Total Stocks outstanding.....	$6,092,506 90

The State Debt Sinking Fund Tax levied upon the duplicates of 1866 amounts to $1,118,000.50. Deducting delinquencies and costs of collection, the net receipts from the tax will be about $900,000. Unless the appropriations, which can not be anticipated, shall be unexpectedly large, enough may be drawn from the General Fund, without embarrassment to the treasury, to redeem seventy-five per cent. of the 2½ per cent. Stocks on the first day of July next; or, deducting the amount held by the Sinking Fund, it may be safely estimated that the entire amount of these Stocks can be redeemed and the same rate of taxation will, within four years from that time, entirely extinguish the debt which consists of 5 per cent. and 2½ per cent. Stocks. The diminished amount of local taxation, which may reasonably be expected on account of the speedy obliteration of county indebtedness, will enable the people to sustain the present standard of State and Sinking Fund Taxes without feeling the weight to be too heavy, especially in view of their early relief from the burden of a Public Debt, which has been hanging over them, in one shape or another, for more than thirty years.

The amount of War Loan Bonds outstanding is $848,000. Of this sum $539,000 are held by the Sinking Fund, leaving $309,000 to be redeemed. After extensive publication that the State was ready to redeem these bonds on the first of May last, only $50,000 were offered for redemption. It is, therefore, evident there is no demand by the holders that they should be taken up any faster than the convenience of the State may suggest. The same remark applies to the Vincennes University Bonds, amounting to $66,585, which are not due until 1885.

There remain outstanding of the old Internal improvement Bonds $253,000.

THE SCHOOL FUND SETTLEMENT.

The Board of State Debt Sinking Fund Commissioners have not been able to make settlement with the Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners, as required by an act entitled "An act authorizing and requiring the Commissioners of the State Debt Sinking Fund to make settlement with the Sinking Fund Commissioners, for $422,000 of the War Loan Bonds, purchased by the Sinking Fund Commissioners, with money belonging to the Common School Fund; also the sum of $165,000, moneys belonging to the Common School Fund, advanced by the Sinking Fund to pay interest on the State debt; also the sum of $33,536 09, Saline Fund, and $29,947, belonging to the Bank Tax Fund. Directing the transfer of the Common School Fund of the State of Indiana of so much of the two and one-half and five per cent. certificates of stock of the State as will, at the price paid for the same, amount to the aggregate of the sums mentioned in this act, authorizing and directing the proper officers of State to issue a bond of the State for the amount thereof, bearing six per cent. interest, payable semi-annually. Principal payable and redeemable at the pleasure of the State; directing the Treasurer of State to pass to the credit of the General Fund the several amounts therein specified, and declaring that an emergency exists for the immediate taking effect of this act."

The manner of making the settlement is set forth in the second section of the act, as follows:

"The said State Debt Sinking Fund Board are hereby directed to transfer to the Common School Fund of this State so much of the two and one-half and five per cent. certificates of stock of this State as will, at the price paid for the same, make a sum equal to the aggregate of the several amounts enumerated in this act, and, upon such settlement, the officers of State are directed to issue a bond for the price paid for the same to the Common School Fund, payable at the pleasure of the State, and bearing six per cent. interest, the interest payable semi-annually, for distribution for school purposes, on the fourth Monday in April and the fifteenth day of October, unless said last day fall upon Sunday, and if so, then upon the Monday following, in each year, for the benefit of the Common Schools of the State; and when the said bond shall have been executed, the Treasurer of State is directed to pass to the credit of the General Fund, in the Treasury, the sum of thirty-three thousand five hundred and thirty-six dollars and nine cents, and the further sum of twenty-two thousand nine hundred and forty-seven dollars, belonging to the Bank Tax Fund."

The Boards met to make the settlement, as required by the act, but, after consultation, found it impracticable to do so, for the following reasons :

1. The State Sinking Fund Commissioners are required to transfer to the Common School Fund so much of the two and one-half and five per cent. certificates of stock of the State as will, at the price paid for the same, make a sum equal to the aggregate of the several amounts enumerated in the act. The certificates of stock held by the State Debt Sinking Fund Commissioners were purchased in pursuance of acts which were passed for the purpose of extinguishing the State debt, and as soon as purchased are regarded as so much of the State debt redeemed and canceled. It is, therefore, a matter of grave doubt whether the act is explicit enough, if it does not fail altogether, in directing the re-issue of stocks purchased on account of the State Debt Sinking Fund.

2. The act does not designate who shall be the custodian of the stock thus transferred.

3. The act does not define the manner in which the interest shall be paid.

4. If settlement could be made, as contemplated by the act, the State Debt Sinking Fund Commissioners would be compelled to transfer certificates equal to the aggregate of the several amounts due the School Fund, and the State officers are also required to execute a bond, bearing six per cent. interest, payable to the School Fund, which, in effect, would be paying the amount due the School Fund twice—once in certificates of stock, and once by bond bearing six per cent. interest.

It has been suggested that the framers of the law intended that the certificates of stock should be surrendered to the State Debt Sinking Fund Commissioners, upon the execution of the bond, so that in reality the State debt would remain unchanged; but the conjecture is not verified by the reading of the law, and therefore not deemed of sufficient authority to justify the transfer, especially as such transfer could not be made without destroying the identity of the certificates, as certificates held for, and purchased on account of, the State Debt Sinking Fund.

It is a matter of great importance that the claims of the Common School Fund, against the State, should be adjusted, in order that a specified interest may be accruing to the fund. For this purpose it is to be hoped that the General Assembly will pass an act, explicit in its provisions, requiring a speedy and equitable adjustment.

TAXATION OF NATIONAL BANKS.

The system of National Banking having been inaugurated after the passage of the General Assessment Law, and the Legislature having failed to pass any specific act upon the subject, it became a question whether the certificates of stock in these banks could be taxed, and, if so, in what manner they should be assessed. Accordingly I referred the matter to the Attorney General, who gave it as his opinion that the certificates were taxable in the hands of the holders. In pursuance of this opinion I issued a circular to the County Auditors directing them to have the assessments made. But there was a disposition on the part of some of the banks to resist the proposed taxation, and a suit was brought in the Marion Court of Common Pleas to test the question, which resulted in a decision by the Court that the banks were not taxable, for the reason that there was no law under which they could be assessed. On behalf of the State a motion for appeal was made, and it is hoped that a decision may be obtained from the Supreme Court at its ensuing term. If that tribunal shall affirm the decision of the Court below, or if no decision should be reached at the November term, it will be incumbent upon the Legislature to pass a law applicable to the case, that the large amount of wealth invested in the stock of these banks may bear its share of the burden of taxation. In framing a law I would recommend that the stock be taxed in the name of the corporation, and not in the hands of the individual stockholders, in order that the whole amount may be reached, and especially that portion held by non-residents.

THE DOG LAW.

The "act to discourage the keeping of useless and sheep-killing dogs," approved March 2, 1865, although containing an emergency clause, embraced no provision for its circulation prior to the general distribution of the laws, and consequently the tax levied by the act was not placed upon the duplicates. As soon as this fact was ascertained I issued a circular directing County Treasurers to assess the tax under the provisions of an act authorizing them to make assessments of omitted taxes, approved March 3, 1859. Those officers, generally, attempted to fulfill the instructions of the circular, but met with many difficulties of construction, and the necessity of taking the affidavit of each tax payer as to the possession or ownership of dogs, especially during the thronged term of tax paying time, rendered the execution of the law almost impossible. Added to this, and increasing their embarrassment, was the fact that the Judges of two of the Circuit Courts (Judge Bicknell and Judge Eckles) declared the act to be unconstitutional. I am not informed as to the grounds upon which their decision was based, but understand that the principal reason was that under the Constitution no specific tax can be levied. I have made every effort to have the case brought before the Supreme Court, but, so far, without success. Without expressing any opinion of my own, I deem it proper to state that the Attorney General and other eminent attorneys coincide with the views of Judges Bicknell and Eckles, and, in view of the strong presumption that the act is in conflict with the Constitution, I would respectfully suggest its repeal, or such amendments as will bring it into conformity with the organic law of the State.

A DELINQUENT SWAMP LAND TREASURER.

Upon the expiration of the term of office of Daniel A. Farley, as Treasurer of Pulaski County, August 4, 1865, the books of this office showed an indebtedness to the State, on account of the Swamp Land Fund, of $2,262.08. Soon after the defalcation appeared I made a statement of his account and sent it to Messrs. Pratt & Baldwin, attorneys at Logansport, for collection. In the investigations which followed it was ascertained that Farley had not filed any bond for the faithful performance of his duties under the Swamp Land Act. He had made an assignment of all his real estate to his bondsmen as Treasurer of Pulaski County. In this emergency I took the responsibility of effecting a compromise, obtaining 440 acres of land and taking a deed therefor to myself as Auditor, in trust for the State of Indiana. I respectfully request that this action may be legalized by the Legislature, and suggest the passage of a law conferring power upon the Auditor to act in such, or any cases, when, in the opinion of the Attorney General or other attorneys employed by the State, legal remedies are exhausted, or when a prosecution would be fruitless, and also providing what disposition shall be made of property thus obtained.

APPRAISEMENT OF REAL ESTATE.

This is a subject which, I regret to say, does not appear, heretofore, to have occupied the careful and serious attention of the Legislature. Alike the most sensitive and the most important department in our system of taxation, because upon it rests in a great measure the jewel of equality in the apportionment of public burdens, and demanding the utmost caution and the nicest scrutiny in its adjustment, it has failed to receive the attention due to the most ordinary subjects of legislation. The acts upon our statute books are crude in design, imperfect in detail, and totally inadequate in execution, to secure the end which should be the object of all laws relating to the subject of taxation. It is well known that the valuation of real estate is unequal—and consequently unjust—in all the grades from individual cases to the Congressional Districts. It is for the wisdom of the General Assembly to devise a remedy for this one great defect in our otherwise admirable system of adjusting the burdens which should bear in equal proportion upon all; and I commend the subject to your earnest consideration in order that the re-appraisement to be made in 1869 may be just and equitable to individuals, townships, counties and congressional districts, only suggesting that the appraisers in different wards and townships should be required to meet often for conference and comparison of views and labor, that they should be allowed ample time to perform their duties faithfully and well, that the terms of session of the County, District and State Boards of Equalization should be extended, that power should be conferred upon the Auditor of State to enforce the decisions of the State Board, and, in general, that a too rigid economy of either time or money should not be exercised in securing an object so important to the people as equal taxation.

In this connection I would also suggest the revision of the act for the appraisement of Railroads. The present act is so lamentably deficient that it is doubtful if a single Railroad in the State is legally assessed. While the appraisements of the different roads were extremely unequal, it was questionable whether the State Board of Equalization had any authority or jurisdiction in the premises, and the result was a quasi compromise by which the Companies owning the roads almost, in effect, fixed their own standard of appraisement. An act creating a Board of Appraisers to consist of the County Auditors along the line of each road, to meet at such time and place as the Auditor of State should designate, make the appraisement and certify their proceedings through this office to the State Board of Equalization, or to a separate Board created for that purpose, which should have full and final authority to equalize the valuation of all the Railroads within the State, would probably secure the desired end.

CONCLUSION.

I deem it my duty to again call the attention of the Legislature to the insufficient and unsafe provision made for the State offices, and recommend that some arrangement be made for the better protection and more ample accommodation which the importance and increasing volume of the archives of the State demand.

The Auditors of DeKalb, Jackson, Jefferson, Ripley and Sullivan counties failed to place the Township Library Tax upon their several duplicates for the year 1865; and the Auditors of Adams, DeKalb, Elkhart, Knox and Sullivan counties have failed to enter the same tax upon the duplicates for 1866. Justice would seem to demand that these counties should be omitted in the distribution of the books purchased out of the proceeds of the tax, or that they should be required to make up the deficiency out of their county treasuries, or by the levy of a special tax. The following circular, issued from this office, will show that the Auditors were furnished information as to the levy in ample time to place all the taxes upon their duplicates. A similar circular was issued on the 28th of April, 1865.

THE STATE OF INDIANA,) OFFICE AUDITOR OF STATE,)
Indianapolis, May 26, 1865.)

TO COUNTY AUDITORS:

The taxes to be levied upon the Duplicate of 1866, and to be accounted for at the State Treasury, are as follows:

For State purposes, 25 cents on each $100 of valuation, and 75 cents on each poll. Acts of 1865, Regular Session, page 73.

For School purposes, 16 cents on each $100 of valuation, and 5 cents on each poll. Acts of 1865, page 3.

For Sinking Fund purposes, 20 cents on each $100 of valuation. Acts of 1861, Regular Session, page 107. Acts of 1861, Special Session, page 19. And Acts of 1865, Special Session, page 48.

For Township Libraries, 1 cent on each $100 of valuation. Acts of 1865, Special Session, page 31.

Very respectfully,

T. B. McCARTY, Auditor of State.

The Auditors of Clay, Harrison, Henry and Ripley counties failed to report the abstract of assessment of real and personal property, and the abstract of taxes levied on the duplicate in time for insertion in this report, although its publication is delayed to the latest possible date, in order that the showing may be complete and satisfactory.

For the purpose of making it a matter of more permanent record, I have caused to be printed a sufficient number of the plats showing the enumeration of white male inhabitants in the several counties to insert a copy in each volume of this report.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

T. B. McCARTY,

Auditor of State.

BANK DEPARTMENT.

CONDITION OF THE FREE BANKS.

The following statement shows the condition of the Free Banks of the State on the 31st of October, 1866; also the number continuing under the law, the number that are closing and that have withdrawn their securities, and the amount of notes retired from circulation from the 1st of April, 1865, to the date of this report.

Under the influence of the system of finances adopted by the General Government during the war, and which system brought into existence Government currency and National Banks, the Free Banks of Indiana have been compelled to close business as Banks of issue, or continue to transact business under the law of 1855, regulating Free Banking, except so far as the same relates to the issue of circulating notes. There are, however, but three Banks which have not given notice, as the law requires, previous to winding up and withdrawing securities—the Bank of Salem, New Albany, Bank of Salem, Salem, and Bank of Paoli, Paoli. All the rest of the Free Banks—twenty-eight in number—have given notice of closing, and are winding up. Their aggregate circulation is fifty-seven thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine dollars.

The total circulation of the Free Banks, on the first of April, 1865, as shown in the report for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1865, was one million two hundred and ninety-three thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars ($1,293,750). The amount outstanding October 31, 1866, seventy-three thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars (73,770), a reduction during the eighteen months between the dates given, of one million two hundred and nineteen thousand nine hundred and eighty dollars ($1,219,980).

This amount of currency was withdrawn and destroyed by the several Free Banks, as stated in the annual report for 1865, in obedience to a decided preference, manifested by the public, for Government Greenbacks and the notes of National Banks, and for the purpose of organizing under the acts of Congress relative to the formation of National Banks.

It is a matter of congratulation on the part of the citizens of the State, and which reflects great credit upon the Banks, to know that the decision of the public was promptly recognized by the latter, and the greater part of their circulation retired without hesitation or delay, and without causing panic or pecuniary embarrassment in any community.

During the quarter following the first of April, 1865, there had been returned to this office and destroyed by burning, eight hundred and eighty-four thousand seven hundred and ten dollars, or more than two-thirds of all the circulating notes of the Free Banks at the date mentioned.

During the six months ending September 30, 1865, there had been returned and destroyed one million and eighty thousand nine hundred and seventy-five dollars; and during the nine months ending December 31, 1865, one million one hundred and seventy-three thousand six hundred and sixty-eight dollars.

In view of the fact that the Banks are winding up business as rapidly as they are enabled to do so by the slow return of the outstanding notes, and that they have now a limited circulation, I would suggest an amendment to the Free Banking law, limiting the time of bonds, given to secure the redemption of notes, so that there may be a time when the bonds can be surrendered, and the business relations between the State and the Free Banks brought to a close.

The average circulation of the several Banks is, at this date, reduced to an amount which probably little exceeds the notes destroyed and lost, and it is not, therefore, necessary to continue a nominal liability of principals and sureties, and their heirs, to an indefinite period.

JOHN I. MORRISON,
Treasurer of State.

GENERAL REMARKS.

CONTRACTION OF STATE CURRENCY.

Upon my accession to the charge of this Department, on the 10th day of February, 1865, a very large proportion of the Funds in the Treasury was of the notes of the several Free Banks and of the various Branches of the Bank of the State. Congressional action, looking to the almost precipitate retirement of this currency in favor of the National issues, soon made it impossible to pay out such State notes without great dissatisfaction and inconvenience to the recipients. On the 1st day of May, 1865, the Banks of this city gave public notice that they would neither receive nor pay out said notes except at a discount. Many of the Banks throughout the State followed the example. Determined to sustain the State credit as far as was in my power, and to keep State orders at par, whatever might be the rates of discount on the notes of our Banks charged by bankers here, I have not offered to pay out a dollar of such notes since the above date. I have, however, continued to receive them at par, in accordance with law. During the April settlement with County Treasurers in 1865, running through the months of May and June, and including the heaviest receipts of the year, the principal portion of money received was of this class; so that, as it accumulated, though a considerable addition to my labors, I was compelled to sort it and send it home for redemption in order to have a sufficient amount of par currency to meet the daily disbursements. The Banks without a single exception, with commendable promptitude, returned dollar for dollar in National issues.

Less than three years ago State currency was our principal circulating medium—there is now but little of it in existence. It is a gratifying evidence of the soundness and security of the late banking system of Indiana that no ruinous change of values, no suspension, no financial panic has resulted from this sudden contraction of the State currency. It has been quietly redeemed at its face value whenever presented at the counter of the Banks that issued it. Even our State legislation has not been disturbed by it. It is one of the results of the war which has not as yet been recognized by our law-givers. Section 2, page 227, Acts of 1859, which has been neither amended nor repealed since that time, reads as follows :

“From and after the first day of October, 1859, all State revenue, and all dues accrued, accruing or that may accrue to the State, or to any fund belonging to, or under charge of the State, or of any officer thereof, required by law to be paid in money, and all disbursements from the State Treasury, shall be paid in gold or silver coin, or in the notes of solvent specie-paying banks regularly organized under the banking laws of this State.”

It will be seen that this Section has been practically annulled by the general suspension of specie payments, as well as in consequence of National legislation having made greenbacks “a legal tender for all debts, public and private,” and the subsequent Congressional action relative to National Banks. As our old State issues have been withdrawn from circulation, and as neither gold nor silver is readily obtainable, the law stands a dead letter upon our statute books, and should be so revised as to empower public officers to receive and disburse such moneys of National issue as are, at the time, in general circulation at par.

MONEY BORROWED FOR STATE DEBT INTEREST.

On the first day of November, 1865, there was but $96,521 54 in the Treasury, and this was reduced to $40,451 24 on the first of December. At this time of the year the receipts are light, and it was easy to see that the money on hand would be entirely exhausted in current expenses, including the expenses of the extra session of the Legislature, before the first day of January. The interest on the State Debt, falling due upon that date, amounting to nearly $160,000 00, had consequently to be provided from other sources. In the latter part of December, after unsuccessful attempts to negotiate it at a reasonable rate in the New York market, it was finally obtained from the First National Bank of Indianapolis at the low rate of seven per cent. It was drawn for ninety days.

During the winter I was compelled to call repeatedly upon the County Treasurers for whatever State funds they might have collected up to the date of the call; and, by their promptness in responding, the State Treasury was able to meet all its obligations, notwithstanding the fact that, even after borrowing the sum above mentioned, the balance remaining on hand on the first day of January, 1866, was reduced to $1,124 16. The loan was promptly met when due, and all warrants were paid without the slightest temporary suspension for want of funds, thus making apparent the wisdom of Section 11 of the Treasury System Act, authorizing such calls to be made by the Treasurer of State.

MONEY STOLEN.

In order to correct any misapprehension which may have arisen from erroneous reports, I wish to state distinctly that the State Treasury has sustained no loss during my administration. It is true that an adroit thief abstracted four packages of $500 each—$2,000 in all—from the Treasury, during the transaction of public business, about noon on the 4th day of January, 1866; and, although the loss was discovered in a few minutes after the theft, and detectives were at once employed to ferret out the matter, in the absence of sufficient proof the thief could not be brought to justice. The money was thereupon replaced by a similar amount from my private funds, the Treasury thus losing nothing.

INSECURITY OF PUBLIC ARCHIVES.

It cannot be considered creditable that the State should continue, from year to year, to occupy rented buildings for her public offices. It is a narrow policy that can see economy in such a course. Indiana, while eclipsing almost all of her sister States in financial prosperity, should take her stand among them as their equal in the architectural grandeur of her public buildings. They should be at once suitable and safe. There is no building in the city suitable for the Treasurer's, Auditor's and Secretary's offices—at least not enough so to warrant its purchase; and the one now occupied is far from safe—as it is not fire-proof, and has not a single vault for the preservation of the invaluable records and papers stored therein.

I would therefore recommend that liberal provision be made for the early erection of a building for the above-mentioned State offices.

COLLECTION OF DELINQUENT TAXES.

County Treasurers complain that the fees allowed them for collecting delinquent taxes are insufficient. In some townships they can employ no one to collect for less than the whole of the fees allowed by law to the Treasurer, and in still more they can make no collections unless they furnish from their own private funds money enough in excess of the legal fees to pay the collector an ordinary per diem. The result naturally is that frequently no effort is made to collect except in the most accessible townships in the respective counties.

I would recommend that said fees be increased from five per cent., as at present, to ten per cent. Before the existing law was passed eight per cent. was allowed, but even that was scarcely sufficient. It is but justice to those who pay their taxes that others, who are required to by the same law, should not be permitted to escape their dues simply because no officer is sufficiently paid to present their account. I am satisfied that the effect of such an increase of fees would be to largely increase the gross collections and to throw at least fifty thousand dollars per annum into the State Treasury which, under the present system, would remain delinquent forever.

SALARY OF DEPUTY TREASURER.

In the act of 1859, "relative to the salaries of public officers," etc., the Treasurer of State is authorized to employ, "one clerk at eight hundred dollars per annum," and this constitutes the whole clerical force of his office as allowed by law up to the present time. This salary is totally inadequate to the responsibility and labor devolving on the deputy treasurer, book-keeper, and cashier of a treasury in which the aggregate receipts and disbursements of moneys, during the past two fiscal years, has amounted to over fourteen millions of dollars, or over seven millions per annum. I found it utterly impossible to employ any one, at once competent and trustworthy, who would consent to assume the onerous duties of the position at any such nominal salary. I therefore assumed the responsibility of paying eight hundred dollars per annum for clerk-hire in addition to the sum above mentioned, making sixteen hundred dollars additional advanced by me for the two years of my administration, for which amount I ask to be reimbursed by a specific appropriation.

I respectfully recommend that the salary of the Deputy Treasurer be raised to a sum not so glaringly disproportionate to the salaries paid by the business community for cashiers and book-keepers in fiduciary positions to which scarce a tithe of the responsibility is attached.

REDUCTION OF THE STATE INDEBTEDNESS.

By reference to the tabular statements herewith, it will be seen that on the first day of November, 1866, the balance on hand was over $390,000 00, compared with $40,000 00 on the same day in 1865, and this after a reduction of the principal of the public debt amounting to half a million dollars in July last. The Treasury will be able, during the coming year, to pay the interest on her public debt without the necessity of borrowing, as well as all ordinary expenditures of the State government, and, it is estimated, will be in condition in July next to make a still further reduction of the principal of the debt of nearly one million dollars.

Ever since the financial revulsion consequent upon the ruinous inflation and speculation of over thirty years ago, when the State dashed in as wildly as the maddest speculator with her vast "internal improvement" schemes, her debt has been an incubus bearing heavily upon her industrial interests and absorbing the greater portion of her revenues. It must be a source of gratulation to her citizens generally that, without oppressive taxation, this debt is being so rapidly extinguished. With its extinction will necessarily come a reduction of taxation. With a cessation of war expenditures, a prospect of peace, and a future full of promise of prosperity, Indiana holds out superior inducements for the immigration of a manufacturing element which, combined with the growth of enterprise among her own citizens, can scarcely fail to develop her mineral wealth, materially increase her productions and population and add largely to her general welfare.

STATE DEBT.

The funded interest-bearing debt of the State is as follows, viz:

Stock bearing 5 per cent. interest.....	$5,342,500 00
Stock bearing $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. interest.....	1,611,389 90
War Bonds bearing 6 per cent. interest.....	848,000 00
Vincennes University Bonds bearing 6 per cent. interest.....	66,555 00
	$7,868,474 90

A considerable portion of this debt is held by the State, making a reduction in the amount for which the State is liable as follows, viz:

Five per cent. Stocks held by State Debt Sinking Fund Board.....	$764,483 00
Two and a half per cent. Stocks held by State Debt Sinking Fund Board...	96,900 00
	<hr/>
	$861,383 00
Total outstanding debt.....	$7,007,091 90

Of this latter amount the State holds Stocks in trust for the Common School Fund as follows, viz:

Five per cent. Stocks held by Sinking Fund Commissioners.....	$748,080 67
Two and a half per cent. Stocks held by Sinking Fund Commissioners...	323,398 25
Six per cent. War Loan Bonds held by Sinking Fund Commissioners.....	539,000 00
	$1,610,478 92
Total debt exclusive of amount held by State..	<hr/> <hr/> $5,396,612 98

REPORT.

OFFICE INDIANA STATE AGENCY, }
No. 52 WALL STREET, N. Y., }
November 1, 1866. }

To the General Assembly of the State of Indiana:

In pursuance of law, I respectfully submit the following report of my doings as Agent of State, for the two years ending October 31, 1866. The law requires the Agent to report biennially to the General Assembly of the State, but it has been the practice heretofore to report annually. How this practice originated, I am unable to state. But I have thought proper to conform to the law. My report will therefore be found more voluminous than former ones, as it embraces the transactions of the Agency for two whole years.

I took possession of the office on the 21st day of February, 1865, at No 36 Wall Street, New York City, the place occupied by my predecessor. But shortly afterwards I removed it to No. 52 Wall Street, where it still continues. The former office was in a third story, exceedingly inconvenient of access, and at considerable distance from the banking house of Winslow, Lanier & Co., where for many years past the different Agents of State have kept their deposits. By the present arrangement I have a desk at their counter, on the first floor. And this enables persons entitled to interest, to receive it in the office of the Agency, without the inconvenience of climbing long flights of stairs, to find the Agent, and then walking several squares to the Bank to get their checks cashed. I have also a room immediately above the Bank, approached by a stairway leading from the room below. And here the books, papers, furniture, safe, etc., of the Agency are kept. This upper room is properly my office.

Col. John C. Walker, my predecessor, was not present in person to deliver me the possession of the office, but was represented by his brother, Mr. James Walker, who paid over to me the sum of $11,832 76. This he represented as the amount due to the State from Col. Walker, after deducting ten thousand dollars, for two years' salary and the expenses of the Agency. As I had no means at the time, of ascertaining the true condition of Col. Walker's liabilities to the State, I declined giving a receipt in full, but receipted for the amount paid over.

THE STATE DEBT SINKING FUND.

By provision of law, the Auditor of State, the Treasurer of State, and the Agent of State, constitute the Board of the State Debt Sinking Fund Commissioners. It is provided that the surplus funds in the State Treasury, not otherwise appropriated, and moneys derived from various other sources, shall constitute the State Debt Sinking Fund. And such fund is specially appropriated to the purchase of stocks for the benefit of said fund. For the year 1865, said Commissioners invested, of such funds, the sum of $251,152 61, in the five per cent. stocks, and the further sum of $68,000 in the War Bonds, the details of which will be found in the accompanying report. No further purchases were made for the year 1866, for the reason that the law authorizing it was repealed at the special session of the General Assembly in 1865.

REDEMPTION OF STOCKS.

The General Assembly, at the special session of 1865, passed an act for the redemption of the outstanding stocks of the State. This act provides that the sum of ten cents on each hundred dollars of the taxable property of the State shall be levied and collected for the year 1866, and for each and every year thereafter, and when so collected, that this fund, and all the moneys derived from the sale of the public works belonging to the State, and the net annual income from all public works, and all the moneys now belonging to the State Debt Sinking Fund, and the Sinking Fund proper, or that may hereafter, from time to time, come into said funds, shall be denominated the State Debt Sinking Fund. And all such moneys are specifically set apart for the payment of the principal of the stocks of the State.

In compliance with the provisions of this act, the Auditor of State, the Treasurer of State, and the Agent of State, met in the city of Indianapolis, on the 9th day of January, 1866, and organized their Board by electing Hon. John I. Morrison, as their President, and choosing Jerome C. Burnett, Esq., as their Clerk. And they then entered at once upon the discharge of their duties as such Commissioners. Notice was given by us in the first week of January, 1866, as the law requires, that the Agent of State, would, on the first day of May thereafter, at his office, in the city of New York, redeem the War Loan Bonds, at their par value, to the extent of the moneys on hand belonging to the State Debt Sinking Fund specially applicable to that purpose.

In pursuance of said notice, there were presented to me for redemption, bonds amounting in the aggregate to the sum of thirty-three thousand dollars, which I redeemed. The details will be found in the accompanying report. It was certainly a great compliment to the financial condition of our State that so small a number of bonds was presented for redemption. The Commissioners had at their disposal funds nearly sufficient to redeem the entire outstanding bonds. But such confidence had the holders in the ability of our State to meet her liabilities, that they choose rather to hold them than to take the money for them. This was not the case with the two and-a-half per cent. stocks, but that is accounted for by the low rate of interest which they draw.

By the terms of the aforesaid act, all moneys not used for the redemption of the War Bonds are to be applied to the redemption of the two and-a-half per cent. stocks, if a sufficient amount be presented to absorb such balance; and if not, then the Commissioners may, at their pleasure, redeem any of the outstanding bonds of the State. At a meeting of said Commissioners, in the city of Indianapolis, on the 20th day of April, 1866, it was ascertained that there would be in the Treasury of the State, on the 15th of June thereafter, the sum of $465,070 65, applicable to the redemption of the two and-a-half per cent. stocks. Notice was accordingly given at the city of New York, and at Indianapolis, that the Agent of State would, at his office in New York, on the 1st day of July following, be ready to redeem, at their par value, the two and-a-half per cent. stocks, to the extent of the aforesaid sum, and that holders of such bonds, who were willing to accept said proposition, should make the same known, by giving notice to the Agent of State of their intention, on or before the 20th of June. In accordance to said notice, there were presented bonds amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $1,550,235 53, upon which has been paid, the sum of $455,010 52, leaving unpaid the sum of $10,060 15. The particulars of these payments will be found in my report.

In this connection, I deem it my duty to refer to the circumstances under which this act was passed, and to point out some of its imperfections. Two propositions, looking to the adjustment of our indebtedness, were presented to the General Assembly, at the special session of 1865. One was known as the Bradley Bill. It originated in the Senate, and gave preference to the two and-a-half per cent. stocks. The other, called the Branham Bill, originated in the lower House. This bill gave the preference to the War Loan Debt. Each bill had its warm supporters, and every attempt at a compromise failed, until the evening of the last day of the session. Then a Committee of Conference was appointed, which at last agreed on the bill under consideration. So important a measure, prepared in such haste, must necessarily be imperfect in its details. And so this bill proves to be.

The body of the bill provides for the redemption of the War Loan Bonds, giving them precedence. And yet the title to the act makes no reference at all to them. And the bill itself does not (only by inference) authorize the drawing of money from the Treasury for paying those bonds. Neither does it specify, when those bonds are presented for redemption, how they shall be disposed of; whether paid in full, and in the order presented, or pro rata. And in case an amount exceeding the funds appropriated for that purpose should be presented for redemption, it would be left entirely to the discretion of the Agent what course to pursue. In the 4th section, which makes provision for the redemption of the two and-a-half and five per cent. stocks, no times are fixed when it shall be done, leaving that also a discretionary matter with the Commissioner. The bill provides that stocks presented for redemption, that is, the two and-a-half per cent. stocks, shall be paid pro rata, and the amount paid credited upon the certificate, which is then to be sent to the Auditor of State. And he is then to cancel that certificate and issue a new one for the unpaid balance. This will require a new issue of certificates each year, which very greatly increases the labor of the Auditor, and of the Agent of State, without any corresponding compensation. It occurs to me that the same object could be accomplished with much less labor, by taking the receipt of the holder on the back of the certificate, and charging him upon the Ledger with the amount thus paid.

I have conversed with a large number of the bondholders, since the passage of this law, and most of them express great dissatisfaction with it. In fact, it does not meet the views of any class of our bondholders. The holders of the two and-a-half per cents. object to the War Bonds being preferred to them. And when it is urged that the faith of the State is pledged for their early redemption, they earnestly rejoin that the faith of the State was previously pledged for the payment of their bonds.

And again, the holders of the five per cents. object to both the other classes being preferred to them. The argument for giving precedence to the two and-a-half per cents. was that they bore a low rate of interest. To this, the holders of the five per cents. object, that if that rule be correct, then they ought to have been preferred to the holders of the War Bonds.

Without expressing any opinion upon the merits of this controversy, I have aimed merely to repeat the various arguments of each side.

THE OFFICE OF AGENT OF STATE.

Recommendations have been made, at various times, in favor of abolishing this office. In this I fully concur, if it can be done without violating our contract with our bondholders. It is provided, in this contract, that the State of Indiana shall keep an Agent in the city of New York, who shall semi-annually pay the interest accruing on her bonds. This is an important part of the contract, and, without the assent of the bondholders, it cannot be disregarded. If, therefore, it is thought best to abolish this office, it strikes me that the first step should be to make some arrangement with our bondholders, by which they shall agree to relinquish this right. It is certainly very desirable to discontinue this office at the earliest practicable moment. Not only is it the source of heavy expense to the State, but it has been also the instrument by which the fair name of our State has suffered not a little.

THE BOND OF THE AGENT OF STATE.

I would call your attention, also, to the fact that, by the law of the special session of 1865, the amount of money entrusted to the Agent of State is greatly increased. The Agent is at present required to give bond in the sum of $150,000. This is certainly too small a sum for the heavy amount now entrusted to his keeping. Under the present law, there will pass through his hands not less than one million of dollars each year. In view of this fact, I suggest that the bond should be increased to whatever amount the interests of the State may seem to demand.

EXPENSES OF AGENCY.

At the regular session, 1865, of the General Assembly, an appropriation of five thousand dollars was made, to defray the expenses of the agency for the ensuing two years, an amount which at the time was supposed to be sufficient for that purpose. On my arrival in New York to take charge of the agency, I found, owing to the greatly increased rate of rent and clerk hire, that said sum would fall far short of defraying such expenses, if the business of the agency was conducted in the manner it had been heretofore. I therefore made the arrangement with Messrs. Winslow, Lanier & Co., referred to in a former part of this report, they agreeing to furnish me office room, a competent clerk, and defray all other necessary expenses of the agency for the appropriation made by the General Assembly. I have paid Messrs. Winslow, Lanier & Co. said expenses up to date, and hold their receipts for the same.

GEORGE A. BUSKIRK,
Agent of State.

TRUSTEES' REPORT.

To the General Assembly of the State of Indiana :

The following report of the Trustees of the Indiana Institution for the education of the Deaf and Dumb, for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1866, is respectfully presented:

It gives us pleasure to state that the Institution has been conducted with its usual measure of prosperity, and that its appropriate work, in all its departments, has been thoroughly and successfully prosecuted.

We would respectfully petition your honorable body for the enactment of a law authorizing the sale of the land belonging to the Institution, with the exception of a part of it hereafter described; and that the proceeds of such sale be invested in Government bonds, and deposited with the Treasurer of State as a permanent fund for the repair and improvement of the buildings and grounds of the Institution. The part to be excepted from such sale lies between the National Road and the Central Railway, and contains twenty-five acres. This forms the grounds proper of the Asylum, including the orchard and garden, and is really all that can be advantageously or profitably used.

The reasons upon which this petition is based, are fully and clearly set forth in the accompanying report of the Superintendent; to the consideration of which you are respectfully invited. They may be briefly stated as follows:

1. The land is inconveniently situated for farming purposes. The whole tract lies in a narrow belt a mile long, and is intersected by five public highways, dividing it into as many separate parts.

2. Experience has shown that farm labor does not afford useful or profitable employment to the pupils. "It is subject to so many contingencies of season and weather that it does not afford that regularity which is necessary to improvement."

3. The pupils, when employed on the farm, are under the necessity of crossing and re-crossing the railways running through the land, thereby exposing themselves to danger from the running of the cars; three fatal accidents having already occurred.

4. The land is too valuable to be retained for farming purposes, and if sold, and the proceeds properly invested, would yield a much larger sum than they can otherwise be made to.

5. The work shops are large and commodious, and are under the management of experienced and skillful foremen. They afford a more suitable employment—one that is greatly preferred by the pupils, and is better calculated than any other to qualify them for future usefulness and independence.

The report of the Superintendent also presents a detailed statement of the financial accounts for the year. Every bill of expenditure having received our closest inspection, we hesitate not to say that the purchases have been economically made, and all the pecuniary affairs prudently and faithfully managed.

The following brief summary will exhibit the resources and disbursements for the year, and the balance to defray the expenses for the remainder of the current quarter:

RESOURCES.

From November 1, 1865, to December 31, 1866.

On account of Current Expenses.....	$45,388 14
On account of Shops.....	4,766 27
On account of Pupils' Clothing.....	1,398 55
Amounting to.....	$51,552 96

DISBURSEMENTS.

From November 1, 1865, to November 1, 1866.

On account of Current Expenses.....	$40,410 12
On account of Shops.....	4,289 50
On account of Pupils' Clothing.....	1,398 55
Amounting to.....	$46,098 17
Balance unexpended Nov. 1, 1866.....	$5,454 79

The estimate of the Superintendent for defraying the current expenses of the Institution for the ensuing two years, is forty thousand dollars for each year. On a careful examination, we are led to the conclusion that this is the lowest possible sum for which the Institution can be successfully carried on. Hence an appropriation for that amount is respectfully asked.

In common with the people of the State, we look upon this Institution as a most noble charity. We are convinced that the most approved methods of deaf mute instruction, devised in modern times, are thoroughly understood, and faithfully applied by Superintendent and teachers. And the more we witness of the wonderful transformation wrought in the mental and moral faculties of the pupils, and all the ingenious appliances used for this purpose, the more profoundly are we impressed with a sense of the high character of the profession in which they are engaged. In order to begin the study of the profession as a specialty with any prospect of success, as high a degree of natural endowment, acquired knowledge, and mental discipline is required as there is in the study of any other profession. And while the good deeds of others never fail to attract public attention, the teacher in this profession finds his reward only in the unspoken thanks of those humble ones whose mental darkness has been dispelled by his faithful and patient labors.

In conclusion, we would bear testimony to the zeal and fidelity of Mr. T. MacIntire, the Superintendent, to whose excellent management the success which has attended the Institution is mainly due, and also to the assiduous and faithful efforts of the other officers and teachers.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

ANDREW WALLACE, President.

JOHN M. KITCHEN, } Trustees.
JAMES C. BURT, }

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

To the Board of Trustees:

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to submit to you the following report of the affairs of the Institution for the year that has just closed:

Twenty-two years have now passed since the institution was first opened for the education of the Deaf and Dumb of the State. The contrast between the early infancy of the enterprise, its uncertainty of success, its weakness and poverty, and its present condition and prospects, is very marked indeed. The school was opened in October, 1844, in small rented buildings; was dependent for support upon private benevolence; and had only twelve pupils the first year. These small beginnings have grown into a large, well-organized, and influential Institution; so that when we compare its situation in those days with its present prosperous condition, we can not but feel thankful to God and the friends of the cause for the aid received, and the blessings so richly bestowed upon all the attempts to advance its welfare.

The efforts put forth the last year to carry forward the enterprise have, it is believed, been crowned with as good a degree of success as in any former year. The officers and teachers associated with us have continued with unabated vigor to labor in their respective departments for the advancement of the best interests of the pupils; and, for their ability, faithfulness, and zeal in their several callings, they are eminently worthy of commendation. Among them all entire harmony has existed, and a disposition to co-operate in carrying out any plans for the promotion of the best interests of the institution.

The pupils, with very few exceptions, have been punctual and diligent in the prosecution of their studies, and have made comcommendable progress in the acquisition of useful knowledge, and in improvement in manners. They have been generally obedient and teachable, orderly and industrious, and, by their good deportment, have shown their high appreciation of the privilege they enjoy.

Among the officers and teachers in the employ of the Institution there has been but one change since the publication of the last report. Miss H. N. MacIntire, who had taught for two years acceptably, resigned at the close of the last term, and Mr. William S. Marshall was appointed to fill the vacancy. It will be remembered by the friends of the Institution that Mr. M., for several years before the rebellion, had been one of our most successful teachers; but at the call of his country, early in the contest, he resigned his position, and entered the army as a volunteer. He served as Adjutant of the Fifty-First Indiana Regiment, in which he continued with honor to the close of the war, when he was mustered out of the service and returned to civil life. We deem the Institution fortunate in again securing his valuable services, and we most heartily welcome him back again among us as an associate in our labors for the deaf and dumb.

During the past year no epidemic has visited the Institution; on the contrary good health in general has prevailed among both pupils and teachers. Considering the large number of persons composing the household, but few cases of severe sickness have occurred. During the spring and summer some of the pupils were attacked with fever and ague, which, however, caused but little inconvenience, and were easily cured. Of a different nature were two cases of illness that happened in the month of October. They were both cases of typhoid fever, and after protracted suffering, and in defiance of medical skill, proved fatal. These pupils, in both instances, had been home spending the vacation, and had just returned to school when they were attacked by the disease. It soon developed itself in its most alarming symptoms, and in the sequel proved too strong to be arrested by any remedy we could devise.

The first one stricken was Miss Mary Jane Rider, a pupil from Allen county. She died on the 18th of October. The other one was Mr. Charles E. Hutcherson, a member of the high class, from New Albany, Floyd county. He died on the 25th day of the same month. The former was fifteen years of age, had been under instruction three years, and was a pupil of more than ordinary promise. The latter was nineteen years of age, had nearly completed the course of study, and was looking forward to the time when he should become a teacher of those who were afflicted like himself. For scholarship, for excellency of character, and for correct deportment, he had not a superior among the pupils.

But they are gone, and their friends mourn, but not as those who have no hope. Both of them gave good evidence of a saving knowledge of the way of eternal life through Christ. While, therefore, with their beloved relatives, we mourn their death, we would also join them in rejoicing in the hope that they have passed to that better life above, where the ear of the deaf hears and the tongue of the dumb sings.

The whole number of persons immediately connected with the Institution the last year, including pupils, teachers, officers, laborers and domestics, was 216, of whom 187 were deaf and dumb, and 182 were pupils in regular attendance, for a longer or shorter period, upon the school. Two have died, and eighteen were discharged at the close of the last session. Since the opening of the present term thirty new pupils have been admitted. The number, therefore, at this date, belonging to the classes, is one hundred and sixty-two.

A catalogue of the names and residences of the pupils in attendance during the year will be appended to this report.

It is a source of sincere gratification to us, as we have no doubt it will be to the members of the Legislature about to assemble, to be able to report that the appropriations made by the last General Assembly, with the balance then on hand, drawn under the general law, have proved sufficient to defray all the necessary current expenses of the Institution, for the whole period of time for which they were intended. The amount drawn in 1864, in virtue of the Statute, on the requisition of the State officers, was $14,942 66, and the amount appropriated for ordinary expenses and the erection of shops, for 1865 and 1866, was $69,000 00; a sum in the aggregate, for the two years and two months, from November 1st, 1864, to January 1st, 1867, of $83,942 66. The balance unexpended at this date, and available for the current expenses of the remainder of the present quarter, is $4,948 02, which, it is believed, with the supplies we have on hand, will be amply sufficient for the purpose.

The estimates submitted to the Legislature two years ago were based upon an anticipated reduction in the cost of living. This anticipation has not been realized; the principal articles of consumption during all the period have cost as much, and some of them more, than they did when the calculation was made. Flour, for instance, is now, and has been for a year past, more costly than was ever known in this market before; so of several other articles. In the cost of groceries and green vegetables there has recently been some reduction; but meats, flour, furnishing goods, repairs of buildings, and wages, have been more expensive the last two years than in any two preceding years in the history of the Institution. Therefore it is the more gratifying that, through the exercise of a strict economy, we have been able to carry on the Institution in its full efficiency, without contracting any debts, or anticipating future appropriations.

The receipts of the Institution, from all sources, including the shops, during the period embraced in this report, have amounted to fifty-one thousand five hundred and fifty-two dollars and ninety-six cents; and the disbursements for all purposes, including the shops and all outstanding accounts at the close of the preceding year, have been forty-six thousand and ninety-eight dollars and seventeen cents, leaving on the first day of November, 1866, a balance unexpended of five thousand four hundred and fifty-four dollars and seventy-nine cents.

In obedience to the statute requiring a detailed statement of the amount of all expenditures made since the last report, we submit, in the appendix, a full list of all the bills allowed by the Board, and the names of the persons to whom they were severally paid, with the amount paid to each, and for what purposes.

✓ Prior to the year 1853 the Institution was supported by a specific tax, and there was no distinction made in the expenditures between the building and ordinary accounts. Since then they have been kept separately. It doubtless would be interesting to the members of the Legislature to know the number of new pupils admitted each year, the aggregate and average attendance, the cost for current expenses per annum, inclusive of repairs and furnishing, and exclusive of buildings and shops; together with the amount expended each period of two years, from one biennial session of the Legislature to another. The following carefully prepared table will exhibit these facts:

Year.	New Pupils Admitted.	Aggregate Number.	Average Num- ber.	Annual Current Expenses.	Biennial Current Expenses,
1853	37	168	131	$23,308 68
1854	28	167	139	24,365 52	$47,674 20

The 7th Section of the act for the government of the Institution makes it our duty to submit to the Legislature an estimate of the "probable sum necessary to defray the current expenses of the Institution until the ensuing session of the General Assembly." With much hesitation we perform this duty. We have economised to the utmost, that was consistent with the best interests of the Institution. In our anxiety to keep down expenses, we have perhaps, in some respects, gone beyond what was just and proper. The salaries of officers and teachers have been kept at nearly the same figures they were when living cost but little over half what it now does. In the same spirit we have made no extra effort lately to increase the number of pupils; only receiving those who applied. If the finances had justified it, with proper exertion, we could have had, under instruction, over two hundred pupils, a number about in proportion to what the population of the State ought to furnish. We refer to these things, not in the way of apology; for we have been actuated by a sense of duty to the State, much less in the spirit of complaint, but to show the difficulty under which we labor. Formerly the cost per pupil was only $174 per annum. The average for the last three years has been $236. Nor is this sum high; it is less than is now paid for boarding, tuition and incidental expenses in any respectable seminary in the country. In most of them this sum would scarcely cover the cost of boarding; to say nothing about instruction, medical attendance, books and apparatus, which, from the necessities of the case, are with us heavy items of expense.

Therefore if provision should be made for two hundred pupils, an appropriation of $50,000 will be necessary. This we do not ask; nor do we think it advisable under present circumstances. But we do recommend most earnestly, that provision be made for one hundred and sixty-five pupils, a small advance upon our present number. This, at the lowest we can figure it, will require $40,000 per annum, for the period for which we estimate. We would not presume to dictate to the Legislature, nor to doubt their wisdom or liberality; but we would express our conviction, that should this estimate from any cause be reduced, the usefulness of the Institution will have to be contracted in the same proportion.

It is believed that the members of that body, in common with the citizens of the State, would deprecate any backward movement in this benevolent enterprise, and would hesitate to lay upon the officers of the Institution the necessity, from the want of adequate provision for carrying it forward, of shortening the course of study, and of reducing the number of pupils.

Therefore, with these remarks, we submit as the result of our most careful calculation, the following estimate of the sums necessary for defraying the current expenses of the Institution for the ensuing two years:

There will be needed to defray the current expenses of the Institution for the year 1867, the sum of forty thousand dollars; and for the year 1868, the further sum of forty thousand dollars.

We respectfully recommend that these sums be appropriated, and made payable to the order of the Board, provided that only so much of them shall be drawn from the Treasury as shall be found necessary for the economical support of the Institution. Then should the cost of living recede before the end of the period for which we estimate, in the same proportion the appropriations would be unexpended.

In this connection the attention of the members of the Legislature is invited to the subject of the sale of a portion of the land belonging to the Institution. There is more land than we can use profitably; and it seems to us that the time has arrived when it uld be disposed of to great advantage. There can be no doubt that the proceeds from the sale of the surplus, properly invested, would be fourfold more productive of good to the deaf and dumb in promoting their education, than is possible to obtain from the land by cultivation. It is too valuable to hold for this purpose.

The design of the founders of the Institution was to make manual labor an essential part of the plan for the education of the deaf and dumb. They did so, not so much for the pecuniary profit, as for the benefit of the pupils. Hence a farm was purchased, and the cultivation of the soil was introduced among them. For five years the male pupils devoted their time out of school to this employment. But work in the field, it was found, exposed them to the inclemency of the weather, and was detrimental to their health; the time allotted, morning and evening, to this object, was mainly consumed in going to and returning from the field; but little real work could be accomplished, and so much supervision was necessary, that it cost more than the work was worth; so that the result of each year's trial has proved the employments to be unsuitable, and of little profit to the Institution, or benefit to the pupils.

In the year 1852 the Legislature appropriated funds for the erection of Shops, and the following season mechanical branches were introduced. Nine out of ten of the boys prefer learning a trade to working on the farm. As an exercise connected with study, and as a preparation for future life, in the cultivating of habits of order, punctuality, diligence, and the ability of self-support, it is, as an occupation, in every way preferable.

The Institution owns one hundred and twenty acres. The original cost was six thousand dollars. It was purchased in three parcels and was deeded to the State for the Institution for Educating the Deaf and Dumb. It lies in a narrow belt, just one mile long, from north to south. There runs through it five public highways, occupying seventeen acres of ground. To inclose it there is more than three miles of fence required to be kept up. The roads that run through it, from west to east, divide it into five parts. There are thirty-six acres lying north of the National Road, twenty-five acres between that road and the Central Railway, which constitutes the proper site for the Asylum, and includes the orchard and vegetable garden. Between the Central Railway and the Michigan Road there are twenty-one acres. South of the Michigan Road and north of the Cincinnati Railroad there are thirty-six acres, and two south of that road.

The twenty-five acres on which the Institution stands is all that is really necessary or valuable for any proper purposes connected with it. The thirty-six acres north of this, and all that south of it, and lying between the railroads, ought to be disposed of. That on the south, especially, lies open, and as long as we attempt to cultivate it, the pupils will be exposed to great danger from the running of the cars. Three fatal accidents have already occurred from this cause. Were it sold we would shut the pupils off from all communication with it by a close fence. The land is really not valuable for cultivation, and will bring a high price. Were it sold, and the proceeds properly invested, the interest annually would amount to much more than it can be made to yield in any other way.

Therefore it is respectfully recommended that the Legislature be petitioned to pass an act authorizing the sale of all this land, or so much of it as the Board shall think advisable, as lies north of the Central Plank Road and south of the Central Railway, the proceeds of the sale to be invested in Government Bonds, and deposited with the Treasurer of State, as a permanent fund, for the repair and improvement of the buildings and grounds of the Institution, the interest alone to be used for this purpose.

The shops have been carried on as usual, and have been productive of much good, in imparting to those engaged in them such knowledge as shall be useful for them. An hour and a half in the morning and two hours in the evening, regularly devoted to manual labor, is found not only a powerful means in the formation of character, and in giving to them the ability for self-support after they leave the Institution, but in counteracting that propensity inherent in youth to idleness and mischief when congregated together without being provided with any suitable occupation when out of school. With the older pupils, especially, brief intervals of useful labor take the place, in a great measure, of mere amusement, and in its effects upon their health, their cheerfulness, and the development of their physical powers, it is far better than any system of gymnastics ever devised. Without allowing it to encroach upon the more important fields of moral and intellectual culture, we endeavor to make it a preparation for these, and by frequent alternations of employment, to prevent study from becoming a wearisome task.

For carrying on cabinet-making and shoe-making we have excellent facilities, in the way of buildings, machinery and tools. From twenty to twenty-five boys are engaged regularly three hours and a half a day in each of these shops. The profits of their work fully pays the expenses of their support. For the last year the aggregate receipts from the sale of articles manufactured by them was $4,766 27, and the disbursements for their support $4,289 50, leaving a profit of $476 77.

The female pupils devote the hours of labor each day to such domestic duties as are suited to them, under the judicious management and instruction of the Matron. Besides household work and plain sewing, they embroider and manufacture many fancy and ornamental articles of needle-work for sale, the proceeds of which are devoted to the increase of the library. The amount realized from this source during the year is $126 45.

In the appendix will be found a schedule of the order of exercises, and the division of time—the portion devoted to study, labor, recreation and rest—which will interest the friends of the pupils. Our aim is to secure as great a degree of regularity in the exercises as is consistent with variety. Children, and especially deaf and dumb children, require frequent changes of employment, but in order to accomplish much there must be a time for everything, and everything in its time. To form habits of attention, order, punctuality and diligence is a very important part of their training, and cannot be attained without some such systematic apportionment of time and duties.

We embrace the occasion to say that the Institution, at all suitable hours, is open to the inspection and examination of our citizens, and especially of the members of the Legislature, whom we earnestly invite to avail themselves of the opportunity of their stay at the Capital this winter, to visit it as often as they can, and make themselves acquainted with the means and appliances which the liberality of the State has put in operation for removing the moral and intellectual darkness of this most needy class of her children. Could all our citizens and their honored representatives visit the class rooms, and witness the recitations, and the modes of instruction—the intelligent, happy countenances of the pupils—they would be ready, as those who have gone before them always have been, to grant a munificent share of their abundance to sustain and carry forward this most benevolent enterprise. They will be welcomed by both teachers and pupils.

The reading of newspapers is a valuable source of knowledge and instruction to the pupils. We are gratuitously furnished with the following papers and magazines, and, in behalf of the pupils, we tender to the editors and publishers our sincere thanks for them, and solicit a continuance of the favor. Could they witness how eagerly they are received and read, they would be richly paid for their contributions :

Indianapolis Daily Journal, Indianapolis Daily Herald, Christian Times and Witness, Northwestern Christian Advocate, Religious Telescope, Western Christian Advocate, Presbyterian Witness, Christian Monitor, Ladies' Repository, Indiana School Journal, Madison Courier, Lafayette Courier, Connersville Times, Vincennes Western Sun, Democratic Pharos, Republican Banner, and Journal of Health.

We also tender our thanks to Adolphus Koffman, Esq., of Lafayette, for his continued liberality in donating annually for several years past $25 for the benefit of the library of the Institution. We can assure him that his donations are gratefully received, and are applied in accordance with his wish.

Commending the Institution to the fostering care and continued patronage of the General Assembly of the State, we, with hope and confidence, commit it to that Divine protection and blessing which it has heretofore so richly enjoyed.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

THOMAS MACINTIRE, Superintendent.

RULES AND REGULATIONS

FOR THE

ADMISSION OF PUPILS.

I. The Institution is open to all the Deaf and Dumb of the State between the ages of ten and twenty-one years, for admission as pupils, free of charge for boarding and tuition, upon compliance with the rules. Applicants from other States will be received as pupils on the payment, in advance of one hundred and fifty dollars a year for boarding and tuition.

II. Pupils will be admitted on the following conditions: 1st. The pupil, well provided with clothes, is to be brought to the Asylum punctually at the commencement of each session, unless detained at home by his or her sickness. 2d. The pupil is to remain in the school until the last Wednesday in June, of each year. 3d. No parent or guardian shall be allowed to take a pupil out of the school in session time, without the consent of the Board of Trustees.

III. The annual sessions of the school commence on the first Wednesday after the 15th day of September, and close on the last Wednesday of June. Every pupil is to come promptly on or before the first day of the session, and is to remain until the last day of the same. The only exceptions allowed are cases of sickness.

IV. The Institution will provide for each State pupil regularly admitted, boarding, lodging, washing, superintendence of conduct, manners and morals, medical attendance, instruction, school books, slates, and all other incidental expenses of the school room, without charge; but will not pay the traveling expenses of pupils in coming to or returning from the Institution, nor supply them with clothing, except in extreme cases of destitution.

V. Those who are unable to pay for the necessary clothing, or whose parents neglect to supply them, it is made the duty of the Superintendent to furnish, in accordance with the following legislative enactment:

“That when the pupils of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb are not otherwise supplied with clothing, they shall be furnished by the Superintendent, who shall make out an account therefor, in each case, against the respective counties from which said pupils were sent, in an amount not exceeding forty dollars per annum for every such pupil, which account will be signed by the Superintendent, and attested by the seal of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, and the Treasurer of State shall charge the account thus certified, to the county from which the pupil was sent, and credit the amount to the current expense fund of the Indiana Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb.

“SEC. 3. When such account shall be received by the Treasurer of the proper county, to whom it shall be immediately sent upon its reception by the Treasurer of State from the Superintendent, such County Treasurer shall cause the same to be paid out of the County Treasury to the Treasurer of State. And such County Treasurer shall collect the amount of such account from the estate of such pupil, if he have any, by suit, if necessary, in the name of the county.”

VI. Each applicant for admission should come well supplied with clothing; and on all articles on which it is possible to mark the name of the pupil, it should be written with indelible ink. In all cases, except those clothed by the County, besides the ordinary supply of clothing, the applicant should deposit with the Superintendent a sum not less than five dollars, to defray incidental expenses, repairs of shoes, etc., any part of which remaining expended at the close of the session will be returned. Each pupil should be supplied with a trunk.

VII. The Institution is not an Asylum; but a school of learning; and hence no one can be admitted or retained as a pupil, who, from sickness or from any other cause is unable to pursue their studies successfully.

VIII. The course of study in the primary department embraces Spelling, Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Geography, and Grammar, and ordinarily requires seven years to complete it. All the pupils who wish it, and will avail themselves of it, are allowed the full benefit of this course of study.

IX. For the benefit of those who wish to qualify themselves for teaching or for other intellectual pursuits, the Trustees have established a high class, and adopted a course of three years study in the sciences. From among those who complete the primary course of study the Superintendent may select each year the most promising pupils and admit them as members of this class; provided that not more than seven shall be admitted to the class in any one year, and not more than twenty-one in all.

X. It is the intention of the Trustees to render the pupils self-supporting, so far as practicable, and that every pupil, on leaving the Institution, shall be so proficient in some useful occupation or trade as to be able to procure a livelihood without reliance on the charities of others. In accordance with this design, all the scholars will be required to labor a portion of each day, the girls performing the lighter kinds of housework, and various kinds of needlework as plain sewing, ornamental work, dress making and millinery; and the boys at various trades, the necessary work about the Asylum, and in the cultivation of the farm and garden.

XI. All business letters, or letters of inquiry in regard to pupils in the Asylum, or those whom it may be designed to place there, should be addressed to THOMAS MACINTIRE, Superintendent, Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, Indianapolis.

XII. Those persons bringing pupils to, or taking them away, can not be furnished with board, lodging, or horsekeeping at the Asylum.

XIII. Applicants for admission should be between ten and twenty-one years of age. Twelve, in ordinary cases, is considered the best age for entering the Institution.

XIV. No pupil, unless under extraordinary circumstances, can be received at any other time than the commencement of the session.

XV. It is desired and expected that all the pupils spend the vacation at home.

TRUSTEES' REPORT.

To His Excellency, O. P. MORTON,
Governor of the State of Indiana:

The Trustees of the State Institution for the Education of the Blind, in this the Twentieth Annual Report of their Board, have the honor and pleasure of presenting their interesting charge to your Excellency, as in a highly prosperous condition. During the past year, the number of pupils received into the school was greater than that of any previous year since its first establishment; and their progress in various branches of study and occupation pursued, is highly commendable to both themselves and the officers entrusted with the immediate charge of the Institution.

At the regular meeting of our Board for December of last year, Mr. T. A. Lewis tendered his resignation as Secretary, to take effect on the 31st of that month; and at the following meeting, held on January 3rd, of the current year, Mr. William M. Stilwell was unanimously chosen to fill out the residue of his term, which expired on March 31st. At the meeting in April, Mr. Stilwell was re-elected for the regular term of one year.

The accompanying report of our Superintendent will exhibit to yourself and the Legislature the details of the operations of the several departments, while the Secretary's report, also submitted herewith, sets forth the various items of expenditure, as allowed by the Board from time to time, at their monthly meetings. Proper vouchers for these are on file in the Superintendent's office, where they are at all times subject to inspection by the appropriate committees of the Legislature, and other State authorities.

From the latter we have compiled the following table, which exhibits the several classes of expenditure under appropriate heads:

On account of salaries and mileage of Trustees and their Secretary.....	$500 80
On account of salaries of Superintendent and subordinate officers.....	4,477 20
On account of wages of employees.....	3,186 76
On account of groceries and provisions.....	8,896 26
On account of stable expenses, including the purchase of spring wagon, repairs on vehicles, horse shoeing, provender, etc.....	610 69
On account of fuel and lights.....	3,537 66
On account of drugs, medicines, and medical attendance.....	383 78
On account of clothing and traveling expenses of pupils.....	2,121 22
On account of postage, telegraphage, and revenue stamps.....	70 77
On account of school apparatus, including musical instruments.....	944 27
On account of books, stationery, and printing.....	311 14
On account of tools and fixtures for workshop.....	97 33
On account of house furnishing supplies.....	1,582 65
On account of laundry, cooking, warming, bathing and lighting fixtures.....	748 02
On account of improvements and repairs.....	4,241 12
On account of hot air furnaces for warming the Institute building.....	1,630 41
	$33,340 08

Deducting from the above footing the sum of two thousand and eighty-six dollars and fifty-nine cents, ($2,086.59), refunded by counties on account of advances for clothing and traveling expenses of pupils, we have thirty-one thousand two hundred and fifty-three dollars and forty-nine cents ($31,253.49), as the actual amount of our expenses for the year.

The resources of the Institution for the year have been as follows, viz:

Balance of appropriation for 1865 in hands of treasurer, as per last report.....	$3,276 64
Amount in hands of Superintendent, as per last report.	1,200 00
Amount of appropriation by regular session for 1866..	20,000 00
Amount of appropriation by extra session for 1866...	15,000 00
Amount refunded by counties on account of pupils' clothing, etc.....	2,086 59
	<hr/>
	$41,563 23
Amount of expenditures brought down.....	$33,340 08
Balance on hand at this date.....	$8,223 15

The balance above shown is deemed sufficient for the current support of the Institution up to February 1st 1867, the termination of the time for which the appropriations were made. It will be observed, therefore, that we have kept our expenses strictly within the limits of the means entrusted to our Board. But we beg leave to remark, that, in order to accomplish this desirable end, we have been obliged to postpone some of the needed repairs mentioned in our last report. Had the sum asked for in that communication, been granted by the Legislature such would not have been the case.

With the appropriations granted, we have, in addition to defraying the ordinary expenses of the Institution, been able to put the cupolas, roofs and gutters of the buildings in thorough repair, and to renew the painting upon the same. So that they are now in a good state of preservation, and will need no further expenditure upon them for some time to come.

The cornices, however, together with most of the interior of the building, are greatly in need of repainting, and must necessarily suffer in proportion to the time we are obliged to neglect them for want of means. We trust, therefore, that your Excellency will urge upon the next Legislature the propriety of making adequate provision for this object.

In former reports, we have called attention to the long felt need of steam works for the proper warming of our buildings, such as are employed in the other State Institutions, and also to the necessity of a more commodious laundry than our Institution now possesses. These wants are still imperative, to make the appointments of our establishment such as they should be, and we would still urge them upon the attention of the Legislature. The hot air furnaces which we introduced last year, answer a tolerable purpose for the time being, but they do not constitute, by any means, so efficient and healthful a means of warming our buildings as is in every way desirable. Should the Legislature be found willing to consider the propriety of making the necessary appropriations for the objects here named, we will, at any time during the coming session, furnish its appropriate committees with the proper estimates for the same.

For the current support of the Institution during each of the years 1867 and 1868, the sum of twenty-seven thousand five hundred dollars ($27,500.00), will be needed, besides an additional sum of not less than three thousand dollars ($3,000.00), for the repairs heretofore mentioned. In view of the continued high prices of all kinds of supplies, and the increasing number of our pupils from year to year, it will be impossible, with the strictest economy, to properly conduct the affairs of our charge with a less sum; and it is earnestly hoped that the Legislature will see the propriety of making the full appropriation indicated. We ask for nothing more than what we believe to be absolutely necessary for the highest interests of the Institution under existing circumstances, and should the sum granted prove more than sufficient, in case of any reduction in the market prices of the necessary supplies, the excess will be carried over to diminish the amount of future appropriations.

In the Superintendent's Report, under the head of "Music Department," will be found some remarks, urging the necessity of an organ for the proper instruction of our pupils in the profession of music, to which we would call the attention of the Legislature. "This subject has been frequently referred to before, and we fully concur with the recommendation of the Superintendent for the early purchase of an instrument of that kind. Should the Legislature see fit to grant an appropriation for this object, we believe that the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars ($2,500.00), will be sufficient.

We would also call the attention of your Excellency and the Legislature to the Superintendent's gratifying exhibit of the present condition of the Work Department of our Institution; likewise to the many other valuable suggestions contained in his Report under appropriate heads.

The Board take especial satisfaction in bearing testimony to the continued faithful services of our able Superintendent, W. H. Churchman, Esq., in the administration of the affairs of the Institution under our charge. To his zeal and ability, and devotion to this work, we are indebted for its superior condition and efficiency, ranking as it does as one of the first, if not the best, school for the education of the blind in the United States. It is a matter of no small gratification, that his plans and ideas, as embodied in the conduct of this Institution, should have been studied, copied, and made the model for other and older States. His present report, hereto appended, has been prepared with great care, and will be found a very able and interesting exposition of the general principles of our system of instruction.

In accordance with the recommendation of the Superintendent, made in consequence of the increasing size of our school, we have added a Steward to his corps of subordinate officers, and confirmed his nomination of Mr. W. M. Stilwell for the position. Mr. Stilwell's services as Steward will commence on the first of December. From his familiarity with the affairs of the Institution, he having been connected with it in the capacity of clerk for several years past, we have confidence that he will do us good service in his new position.

Before closing this report, we would respectfully invite the strictest scrutiny of the Legislature into our official acts and expenditures, feeling full confidence that such scrutiny cannot fail to convince that body that the most rigid economy is observed in the management of all the departments of the Institution, and that our sole aim is to render it in the highest degree useful to the unfortunate children entrusted to our charge.

Respectfully submitted,

ANDREW WALLACE, President.

JOHN BEARD, }
JOHN S. SPANN, } Trustees.

Attest: W. M. STILWELL, Secretary.

APPENDIX B.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

The undersigned, in accordance with the by-laws of the Institution, would respectfully submit the following summary as the Twentieth Annual Report of the Superintendent.

It is cause for thankfulness to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, that our interesting charge has been permitted to enjoy another year of its wonted prosperity in dispensing the benefits of education and the comforts of a home to a large number of the afflicted children of the State. In point of health, our numerous family has been particularly fortunate, no case of severe indisposition having occurred in the Institution during the year, and the number of cases of any kind, requiring the attention of our physician, being unusually small, while the progress of the pupils in every department of instruction and training, has never been surpassed in that of any previous year in the history of the Institution. In the matter of deportment, too, as well as of cheerful contentment and happiness, we think it would be hard to find, in this or any other State, a school of any class of persons that can show a more encouraging record. It is also worthy of remark, that the average intellectual standard of our present school, as to natural ability, is higher than that of any class heretofore under instruction in this Institution. In short, we feel that the people of the State have abundant cause to congratulate themselves upon the ample returns they are receiving for their liberal investment of both money and sympathy in the humane work of ameliorating the condition of the unfortunate "children of night" entrusted to your care.

ASSISTANT OFFICERS.

Since the date of my last report, several changes have taken place in our corps of instructors, as follows:

The assistant teacher in the Music Department, Miss A. A. Dyer, who had been connected with the Institution since the first day of October, 1861, vacated her position on January 2d of the current year, and was succeeded by Miss A. A. Howard, on the 28th of March following, by appointment of your Board, Miss Howard was afterward reappointed to the same position for the present season, and still remains connected with the Institution.

At the close of the last session of the school, Mr. H. W. Ballard, Miss M. L. Vance and Miss S. J. Larned, teachers in the Literary Department, terminated their connection with the Institution, after serving out the full period for which they were appointed. Mr. Ballard had been with us three years; Miss Vance one year, and Miss Larned over four years. The latter had, prior to her engagement with us, been connected for some time with another similar institution, and she therefore possessed an amount of experience in our work, which, aside from her natural fitness for it, caused her discontinuance with us to be felt as a serious loss to the Institution. Of the labors of all three, while connected with our school, I have nothing but commendation to express.

The vacancies created by the withdrawal of the three teachers last mentioned, were filled by the appointment of Mr. G. M. Ballard, Miss S. A. Scofield and Miss J. Cook, all of whom entered upon duty at the commencement of the present session. Mr. Ballard is favorably known to you, as having been previously connected with the Institution for several years, in his present capacity as principal teacher. Miss Scofield already possessed several years experience as a teacher in the Wisconsin Institution for the Blind, and came to us highly recommended by the Superintendent thereof. Miss Cook was without experience in this particular work, but had been for some years a successful teacher in schools for the seeing. All of these new appointees are giving entire satisfaction in the discharge of their duties, and I would bespeak for them the full confidence of your Board.

In the management of the male branch of the Work Department, a change has also been made, Mr. S. McGiffin having been succeeded, on the 1st of April last, by Mr. J. W. Bradshaw, in charge of the shops and the instruction of the pupils therein. Of the success of the latter, in this, to him, new field of labor, I am likewise permitted to bear favorable testimony.

In addition to the above mentioned changes among the incumbents of offices heretofore existing, the office of Steward has been created, and Mr. W. M. Stilwell selected to discharge the duties thereof. Mr. Stilwell is favorably known to your Board as its present Secretary, and as having been connected with the Institution in the capacity of clerk for several years past. You will therefore, without doubt, give him your confidence in his new position.

The remaining members of our corps of assistant officers continue, as heretofore, to labor with fidelity and success in their respective departments, and I would again ask for them the encouragement of your confidence and support.

The whole corps for the current session stands as follows:

Teachers in the Literary Department.—Mr. G. M. Ballard, Miss M. E. Hanna, Miss S. A. Scofield and Miss J. Cook.

Teachers in the Music Department.—Mr. M. B. Clark and Miss A. A. Howard.

Instructors in Handicraft.—Mr. J. W. Bradshaw and Miss P. W. Hawley.

Physician—Dr. J. M. Kitchen.

Steward.—Mr. W. M. Stilwell.

Matron.—Miss L. D. Hawley.

Assistant Matron.—Miss P. W. Hawley.

PUPILS.

The number of pupils connected with the Institution at the date of my last report was ninety-five. Since that date twenty-five new ones have been received, making one hundred and twenty for the year—males, fifty-four; females, sixty-six. For their names and places of residence, see appended catalogue.

All of the above mentioned were residents of Indiana, except one, who was a pay pupil from the State of Michigan.

The following table exhibits the number received from each of the counties represented in the Institution :

Of the one hundred and twenty pupils referred to above, one Barbary Kellar, who entered the school at the beginning of the last session, in a very delicate state of health, died at her home in this city, on Dec. 5; five were honorably discharged; one was expelled for misconduct; three left informally without completing their studies; and five remained away during the year without signifying their intention not to return. Deducting these from the whole number, we have one hundred and five as the present number connected with the school. But of this last number, twelve have not yet returned since the vacation, which leaves the actual number in attendance at this date, ninety-three.

LITERARY DEPARTMENT.

In this department, we have returned to the graded system formerly introduced, but abandoned for the past two or three years. It is found to possess many advantages with us, as in schools for the seeing. We make as many divisions as there are teachers, and give each teacher the special charge of one division, both in and out of the class rooms. In a few instances, however, it is found advantageous for teachers to exchange classes with each other, in order to give them an opportunity to teach in the branches for which they are, severally, the best qualified.

In the routine of studies, no change worthy of mention has been made, excepting the introduction of a method of tangible writing, known as the Braille system, and the memorizing, as a daily class exercise in each division, of appropriate selections from approved writers.

The aim of the last mentioned exercise is not to improve the pupils in declamation, so much as to extend their knowledge of language, and promote a critical taste and judgment in its use. So much of any language, especially the figurative part of it, owes its origin to the visual sense, that its true significance must, in many instances, be hidden from the born blind, or those who lose their sight during infancy, without the intervention of special means for their improvement in this direction; and it is to supply this desideratum, that the exercise alluded to has been introduced. So far, the result of the experiment is thought to be highly satisfactory. The subject indicated by these general remarks, is one of great importance in its bearing upon the education of the blind; but as it will be treated more fully in another part of this communication, we leave it here without further remark.

The course of study adopted for the several divisions during the current session, is as follows:

Division A—Orthography, Reading, Arithmetic, Object Lessons and Memorizing selected Compositions.

Division B—Orthography, Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Geography and Memorizing.

Division C—Orthography with definitions, Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Geography, Grammar, History and Memorizing.

Division D—Definitions, Writing with grooved card and pencil, improved board and Braille slate, Algebra, Mental Philosophy, Rhetoric, Composition and English Literature, embracing criticism and memorizing.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT.

The department of music, under the management of its accomplished principal, Mr. M. B. Clark, continues to perform in a satisfactory manner, its important part in the work of training our pupils for useful independence and happiness.

Most of our present school being quite young, especially on the male side of the house, the orchestral instruction is, for the most part, temporarily suspended, and the choir is not so constituted as to be able to perform the same high order of compositions as during some of the previous years; but increased attention is being given to individual instruction upon the piano forte, and in vocalization; which, after all, is quite as useful to the pupils, though it may not make so imposing a show to the casual visitor. Eight of the male, and twenty-nine of the female pupils, are receiving regular instruction on the piano forte; while the whole school, with few exceptions, are studying the rudiments of music, and being trained in vocal practice. There is also a small class, taking lessons upon the violin and guitar, and another, in theory and composition.

Notwithstanding the recent addition of two piano fortes to our stock of instructional appliances for this department, we still need several more instruments of that class, in order to do full justice to our increasing school. The want of a church organ too, still continues to be felt as a serious hinderance to the proper training of our pupils for the musical profession. Were this supplied, many of our graduates would enjoy enhanced facilities in the direction of gaining a livelihood through their musical attainments. Our's is the only institution of any size in the country, which is destitute of an organ; and until this want is supplied, we cannot hope to do complete justice to those of our pupils, who depend upon their musical education for support after leaving the Institution. It cannot be unknown to your Board that in all parts of our country, as well as in Europe, blind musicians receive liberal patronage as organists in the numerous churches, using the instrument in question. Every year witnesses an enlargement, in our Western country, of this important field of usefulness to the blind, and it behooves us as one of the leading institutions of the West, to avail ourselves of its advantages, in the promotion of the welfare of our pupils.

It is a mistaken notion with some that the main design, if not the only one, of the musical instruction of the blind, is simply to provide for them a source of enjoyment and recreation; and hence the means necessary to its accomplishment, are often grudgingly bestowed by those who furnish them. Were even this limited view of the case correct, there would be abundant reason for liberality on the part of those who are not smitten with misfortune; but in view of the fact that the profession of music offers to the properly trained blind musician one of the most productive fields for honorable independence, and the additional fact that the professed object of our institutions is to provide their pupils with every available facility for self maintenance, the obligation becomes imperative.

WORK DEPARTMENT.

Upon the present condition of this department, we are able to make a highly satisfactory report. Both the male and female branches of it are most successfully carrying out the important work assigned them. But it is of the former that we would speak more particularly.

Under the efficient management of the present contractor, Mr. J. W. Bradshaw, who has been in charge of the shops since the first of April last, they have been carried on with more system, and with better results to the pupils, in the matter of their instruction, than ever before since the foundation of the Institution. He conducts them as an individual enterprise, upon the plan introduced some five years since, and we are more than ever convinced of the correctness of the system in its application to shops of this kind. The Institution is free from the trouble and expense of providing the raw materials and the necessary instructors, as well as from the care, sale, and delivery of the manufactured articles, together with the risk of accumulation and depreciation in prices when the market is dull; while the pupils are more thoroughly trained in skill, industry, and the economical use of materials than they are likely to be under the old system of salaried instructors.

Whatever is to the advantage of the contractor, is likewise to the advantage of the pupil under instruction. If the self-interest of the former impels him to require of the latter that he shall be promptly in his place at the proper time; that he shall work industriously, rapidly, and skillfully while there; and that he shall, in all cases, use his materials to the best advantage, without unnecessary waste, surely the learner is thereby made so much the better mechanic, and hence, put into the best possible condition for obtaining employment after the completion of his trade.

Ours is, we believe, the only institution of the kind where this system prevails, and we should abandon it with extreme reluctance, after our more than five years experience.

It is objected by some with whom we have conversed upon the subject, that, under our plan, the instructor must be liable to neglect the dull of learning, and give his special attention to the more expert. But we have never found any difficulty upon this head so far, and certainly believe there is no more to be apprehended than under the ordinary system. Moreover, this is strictly provided against in our contract with the conductor of the shops. The Superintendent relinquishes nothing of his former control in such matters.

It is also objected, that the contractor cannot sustain himself under such an arrangement, inasmuch as no institution has been able to do so, without more or less pecuniary loss. But our contractor has done it for years, and thus the objection is effectually set aside. Were he to confine himself to the labor of the pupils alone, much of whose work is necessarily inferior, as that of young apprentices, the plan might be less successful. But such is not the case. We permit him to employ, in connection with the pupils, as many skillful journeymen, either blind or seeing, as his business will warrant, and find that the learners, as well as himself, are the gainers thereby in several respects. They are stimulated by the example of the finished workmen to work better and faster, and their general character is favorably influenced by intimate association with experienced seeing persons from the outer world, a circumstance which should have considerable weight with the intelligent educator of the blind.

For the contractor, the employment of additional workmen possesses several advantages. It enables him to extend his business, and give it the character of other establishments where the same kind of work is manufactured; also, to work off the inferior products of his inexperienced apprentices, in connection with the better ware manufactured by the finished workmen; and, when the number of pupils in the shops is too limited to enable him to supply the demand created by a judicious management of his business, as is the case at present with us, it enables him to retain his customers, by obviating the necessity of their going elsewhere for the time being, at the risk of losing them altogether. For example, we have, at this time, no pupils who are desirous of learning the carpet weaving business; yet there is a brisk demand in the market for this article, which must be supplied, or the trade is lost to the Institution. Hence the looms are kept at work by seeing employes for the time being, until some pupils are received who wish to learn the business. It need hardly be remarked, that the contractor is in no case permitted to occupy the shops with seeing workmen, to the exclusion or detriment of our pupils.

Broom making is now the principal trade carried on in our shops, as is the case with most other institutions for the blind in this country; but we also do something at carpet and mat weaving, brush making and chair seating. There are several additional branches which might be successfully pursued by our pupils, were it not that the present number with us, who are old enough to work advantageously in the shops, is too limited to warrant their introduction.

The first mentioned trade is, however, the one above all others which possesses the most advantages for the greatest number of blind mechanics in any part of the country, but more particularly in the West. These advantages have been so frequently adverted to heretofore, and indeed they are so obvious, that they need not be particularized on this occasion. We may be permitted to say, however, before leaving the subject, that to Indiana belongs the credit of first introducing it as a leading branch of manufacture for the blind. In some of the earlier reports of our Institution may be found the history of our first experiments in the business, which led to its general introduction.

In the female branch of our industrial department, the same kinds of work have been executed during the past year as reported on former occasions, and with the usual success.

The subjoined table exhibits the number, variety, and value of the articles made, as to the labor involved in their production. The sewing and knitting were done for the use of the household, and therefore produced no direct pecuniary return to the Institution, but must be estimated as so much saved to our current expense fund. The bead work, however, has proved, as usual, a source of profit, as will be seen by the statement of the business of that branch inserted below.

GENERAL TOPICS.

As reports of this kind constitute a proper and convenient medium for the exchange of views between the different institutions for the blind, as well as for the general dissemination of knowledge upon the subject of blindness, and the means employed to overcome the disabilities imposed by it, we beg leave on this occasion to introduce some thoughts which it is believed will possess interest for those who are in any way connected with our humane work. If in doing so we find ourselves constrained to differ in some respects from the expressed views of any of our co-laborers, we trust that honesty of purpose will at least be accredited to us, however much we may err in judgment.

The following pages have recently been prepared for another occasion; but, as the views expressed are as applicable here as elsewhere, no apology need be offered, it is hoped, for transcribing them without revision.

CAUSES AND DEGREES OF BLINDNESS.

The numerous causes of blindness, immediate and remote, would form a profitable and interesting field of inquiry; but it is one so environed with difficulties that its full discussion here would necessarily occupy more space than could be appropriately devoted to it. It may not be amiss, however, to allude, in a general way, to a few of the more prominent sources of the calamity in question.

In order to a better understanding of the subject before us, it will be found convenient to divide the sufferers into two general classes; the born blind and those who lose their sight at different periods after birth, and to treat of each class separately.

From statistics compiled from the registers of pupils in several of our institutions, embracing fourteen hundred and forty persons, it is shown that about one-fifth of the whole number belong to the first class, or those born blind, and the remaining four-fifths to the second. Strictly speaking, this classification is far from perfect; for it is undoubtedly true that many of the second class are, from birth, so predisposed to blindness, by disease or lack of functional vigor, that only a slight injury, or other exciting cause, is requisite to produce loss of vision; on which account, could the true number be ascertained, they might without impropriety be considered as congenital cases. It will, however, be found sufficiently accurate for present purposes.

Proceeding then to a brief consideration of some of the sources of congenital blindness, or a connate tendency thereto, it would seem that among these the reprehensible practice of intermarriage of blood relations has its full share of responsibility; for in an examination of one hundred and twenty cases of congenital blindness received into the Indiana Institute, statistics upon this point being incomplete in other institutions consulted, we find that one-third are the avowed offspring of such unions; and it is believed that if correct information could always be obtained, the proportion would prove to be much greater. It is a matter of common experience among those who have attempted an investigation into this subject, that the parents and friends of blind children are often induced, by a not unnatural delicacy, to give evasive, and sometimes even untruthful answers to their inquiries. The fact here alluded to, is one of great significance, and invites the serious attention of those who are laboring for the dissemination of such knowledge as lends its influence to the elevation of the human race.

Another fruitful source of congenital blindness, would seem to be the hereditary transmission of general constitutional infirmity, which, though not always recognized as necessarily tending towards the production of blindness, is as liable, under appropriate conditions, to take that direction as any other. It would not be unnatural to expect that blindness is, in itself, often directly transmitted; but statistics do not, to any considerable extent, justify such an assumption. It cannot be denied, however, that where the parents are tainted with constitutional disease resulting in blindness, or tending strongly in that direction, there is, to say the least, an extreme liability to such an unfortunate result. But where the blindness proceeds from causes which are strictly local, that is, confined to the organs of vision themselves, the case is undoubtedly quite different. Nevertheless, as was before remarked, the subject is fraught with difficulty, and the most that can be said upon this branch of it must partake, in a greater or less degree, of the nature of speculation.

Scrofula, in one or other of its manifold phases, as well as drunkenness and all other forms of intemperance which tend to undermine the constitution and vitiate the functions of the bodily organs, are believed to constitute some of the more palpable and productive sources of the general infirmity alluded to in the preceding paragraph. Perhaps the first named is the most prevalent of these. General observation would seem to indicate that such at least is the case in the western and southern sections of our country, where swine flesh forms the staple meat diet of the masses. But whether or not said diet is really productive of a scrofulous condition, as is believed by many, must be determined by those who are better prepared than the writer to examine the subject from a scientific standpoint.

As to the agency of the intemperate use of the corporeal organism, in the propagation of a long catalogue of physical evils in which impairment of vision finds its appropriate place, there can be no question. The truth that nature's laws cannot be violated with impunity, is so plain as to become almost axiomatic.

Of the second general class, those who become blind from causes originating after birth, it is estimated, from appropriate statistics, that about one-seventh lose their sight in consequence of mechanical injury to the organs, resulting from accident or otherwise. The remainder derived their affliction from various forms of disease, some of these attacking the eyes directly, and others indirectly.

As the most prominent of such causes, we may enumerate Purulent Ophthalmia, Conjunctivitis, Staphyloma, Iritis, Amaurosis, Cataract, Cerebro-spinal Meningitis, Catarrh, Whooping-cough, Measles, Small-pox, Scarlet-fever, etc.

Conjunctivitis, of the catarrhal form, and perhaps some others, is quite contagious, and seems to prevail as an epidemic in some sections of our country. Whole families are often attacked with it simultaneously, it being propagated by the common use of the same wash basin and towel, as well as in other ways.

Iritis is, by some authorities, put down as peculiarly a city disease, being very often induced by syphilitic poison in the eyes of the sufferers. Amaurosis, when not congenital, most generally results from persistent exposure of the eyes to intense light, or the undue use of them in the pursuance of study or some occupation requiring close visual application. There are many other ways, however, in which the disease may be superinduced.

Cataract and Staphyloma are very common forms of ocular disease, and may be contracted in a great variety of ways.

The several diseases of a more general character, enumerated as frequent causes of blindness, though not ocular diseases, superinduce loss of vision in various ways, which it would be irrelevant to particularize here.

Again, as to degrees of blindness, we have also two general classes, known as the totally blind and the partially blind, the latter possessing almost as many grades of vision as there are individuals composing it. And it may be here remarked in passing, that, in an educational point of view, all are considered blind, and therefore legitimate objects of institution care, who are unable to pursue their studies by the aid of sight, in ordinary schools.

Of the fourteen hundred and forty persons received into several of our institutions for the blind from which statistics have recently been procured, the number of those totally blind is found to be eight hundred and seventy, or about sixty-one per cent. of the whole number; while in the Institution of Indiana only thirty-four out of one hundred and twenty congenital, and one hundred and thirteen out of one hundred and ninety-nine post natal cases, are found to be total, or about forty-six per cent. of the whole number received. The reason for this difference between the results obtained in the one institution by itself and those obtained in several combined, is not easy of explanation; nor is it of any importance in the present connection, to attempt to account for it. But the fact of so large a proportion of the post natal cases being total, as compared with the congenital, may have an important bearing in another branch of the subject, to be treated of hereafter.

Abstractly considered the above classifications of causes and degrees would seem to be of little moment, but in the examination of the various accompaniments and effects of blindness it will be found convenient and useful; and it is to be regretted that it could not have been more extended. A recent effort was made to collect from all the institutions for the blind in the United States, full statistics upon this subject; but the effort failed, mainly, it is thought on account of the omissions on the part of persons conducting them to record the desired particulars concerning the pupils received.

It is not easy, in all cases, to obtain correct particulars upon these points; nevertheless it would seem to be desirable, for many reasons, that all of our institutions should come as near doing so as possible. In this way much light might be shed upon a subject which is not only of importance to the institutions themselves, but likewise of peculiar interest in a general philanthropic and scientific aspect. On the entrance of every pupil, a thorough examination, surgical and otherwise, should be instituted, and the results recorded in such a manner that the following named particulars may be clearly set forth:

1. The correct age of the person.
2. Whether or not the blindness is congenital.
3. If not congenital, at what age it originated.
4. The degree of blindness, specifying as nearly as possible, when not total, the amount of vision possessed.
5. When not congenital, the assigned cause, naming if possible, when originating in sickness, not only the disease to which the blindness is attributable, but likewise the immediate local disease of the visual organs.
6. The general physical condition, as to chronic disease and constitutional soundness.
7. The degree of mental ability.
8. The physical condition of the parents, as to chronic disease and constitutional soundness, prior to the birth of the child.
9. The habits of such persons as to temperance, etc.
10. Whether such parents were related before marriage, and if so, in what degree.
11. Whether more than one case of blindness exists among the children, and if so, how many, naming also the number not thus afflicted.
12. Whether either of the parents or other relative suffered the affliction of blindness, and if so naming the degree of consanguinity.

It would also be well to renew such examination periodically, so far as the pupil is concerned, and note down any change which may have taken place in the physical or mental condition.

ACCOMPANIMENTS AND EFFECTS OF BLINDNESS.

In treating of the physical and mental condition of persons who are afflicted with blindness, it is almost invariably the case that they are considered as forming a distinct class, separated from the rest of the human family, and possessing in common certain characteristics, corporeal and mental, which distinguish them as members thereof, whereas there is little, if any more reason, for thus abstracting and grouping them than exists in the case of any other set of persons, who happen to be afflicted with a common malady. This undoubtedly arises from the necessity of gathering them into separate institutions of learning, where they may have the benefit of peculiar apparatus and methods of instruction, devised to meet their wants, by adapting them to the tactual sense. But it is very desirable, on many accounts, that care should be taken to avoid this unphilosophical method of treating the subject. Its influence is an unhappy one upon the sufferers themselves, making them, in many instances, feel their misfortune much more keenly, than they otherwise would, and in others, providing a plausible excuse for continuance in peculiar and unbecoming habits which they may happen to contract from improper associations, and which are as reprehensible in them as in any one else. Besides, it tends to mislead the public mind as to the capabilities of the human powers in overcoming the obstacles presented by blindness, and teaches it to look apologetically upon any shortcomings practiced by the smitten ones, as well as distrustfully upon their efforts to battle manfully against the difficulties they must needs encounter in their journey through life. Far better would it be, in every point of view, to pursue a contrary course, and endeavor to counteract every influence whose tendency is to foster the notion of isolation alluded to.

Another prevalent error, akin to the one just referred to, is to class with the untoward influences of blindness upon the bodily and mental powers certain abnormal conditions, which frequently accompany it as concomitant effects proceeding from a common cause, and treat them as necessary to, and inseparable from the accident of blindness; such, for instance, as are often found to co-exist with the lack of vision in the two classes of congenital cases referred to in the preceding section; whereas those same conditions might just as well have been present, and probably would have been, if the organs of sight had been perfect.

Again, this proneness to generalization is manifested in a disposition to attribute to the blind as a class, and as a necessary consequence to their infirmity, divers physical, mental, and moral qualities which happen to be possessed by some of them, in common with all other persons, whether blind or seeing, who have been subject to the same unfavorable influences. The facetious remark of a popular lecturer to his auditors, that, travel where'er they might, they would "find that human nature pretty generally prevails," contained a truth as significant in this connection as the remark was humorous. Such a mode of reasoning reminds one of the far famed physician who, finding that one patient had satisfied his craving for sour kroust with impunity, and even supposed benefit, administered the same article, with fatal effect, to another patient who happened to be ailing with the same disease; and, as the result of his experience, noted down in his memorandum book, that "sour kroust cures blacksmiths but kills lawyers."

Superadded to these unphilosophical practices is still another; as in the case of the French philosopher, Diderot, (who, by the way, does not lack for imitators on either side of the Atlantic,) in his celebrated "Letter upon the Blind for the use of those who See," which is an undue indulgence in speculative, a priori reasoning upon the subject of blindness, instead of following the more correct method of basing their theories upon the results of observation and experience. The influence of this course upon the happiness and well being of the unfortunates to whom it relates would prove a more salutary one, did their reasonings lead them to more encouraging conclusions.

On the other hand there is a class who run to the opposite extreme, and put forth sentiments which encourage false hopes in the objects of their care, as well as in the community at large. The result of this injudicious, though humanely inspired course, is to make those who are subject to its influence over confident of their ability to surmount the obstacles interposed by their infirmity, and, in many instances, almost to persuade them that blindness is a blessing, rather than otherwise. This may be kindness; but if so, it is of the cruel sort. Better would it be for all who are engaged in the management of institutions for the blind to deal frankly with their pupils, withholding nothing from them through fear of discouraging their hopes, but striving in every way to inspire them with fortitude to endure, and strength to overcome the real difficulties of life, which, sooner or later, they must needs encounter. The effect of a course opposite to this will prove, in the end, as discouraging as the one alluded to in the preceding paragraphs.

ACCOMPANIMENTS.

But to proceed to a brief consideration of some of the real disabilities associated with blindness, for that such exist it were vain to deny, it may be remarked, in the first place, that in the two divisions of the general class of congenital cases heretofore adverted to, we often find a feeble, abnormal condition of some or all of the physical powers, and the same is true of some of such of the post-natal cases as possess a connate predisposition to the loss of sight. In the language of a distinguished educator of the blind, "the general texture seems loose, the fibre is minus, while the lymph is plus; there is but little vital force, and consequently little energy in the performance of the functions generally, those of the brain of course included," and as a natural sequence, the psychological manifestations are correspondingly feeble, sometimes, indeed, to the extent of idiocy and lunacy. But it must be borne in mind, that this state of things does not proceed from a lack of vision. It might just as well, and often does, exist with the clear sighted, that is, such of them as have the misfortune to be born into the world with corporeal organisms equally far below the normal standard.

From the lower grades of the class under discussion, but little in the way of positive results can, of course, be expected, even with the most thorough course of training; but the majority are susceptible, to a greater or less extent, of both physical and mental improvement; which will be in the inverse ratio of their distance below par. It is cause for thankfulness, however, to a merciful Providence that the proportion of these manifoldly afflicted, yet innocent sufferers of the penalty of violated natural and moral law, is relatively so small, compared with the whole number of pupils in any one of our institutions for the blind. It hardly need be added that even among the born blind, with such odds against them as a class, there are found some of the brightest examples of success in battling against the difficulties of blindness.

Again, secondly, there will sometimes be found, among those who lose their sight from mechanical injury, or from disease contracted after birth, instances in which a greater or less degree of physical infirmity is associated with their blindness, as coetaneous with it, both being effects proceeding from the same cause; but such infirmity need not, excepting in rare cases, materially influence the mental condition; while there is generally more hope of its eradication, by a proper course of hygienic treatment.

PHYSICAL EFFECTS.

Thus far, we have spoken only of original disabilities, which sometimes accompany blindness, as associate evils, especially where it is congenital, distinguishing them from those which spring naturally from it, and therein admit of being properly denominated its effects. It now remains to point out some of the latter, and consider the proper means for preventing or counteracting them. As the first in order, therefore, brief reference will be made to the effects upon the physical economy.

In view of the well known fundamental law of our being, that vigorous and unrestrained exercise of the muscular system is absolutely essential to a proper development of the physical powers, and healthy condition of all of the bodily organs, but little particularization will be needed under this head. Suffice it, then, to say, in general terms, that in proportion to the degree in which the visual power is lacking in any given case, all other things being equal, will be the interposing obstacles to such a freedom in the use of the bodily organs, as is necessary to secure the requisite amount of exercise, and that, in the absence of the proper use of means for overcoming these obstacles, the amount of damage sustained by the physical powers will, in each individual case, depend upon the length of time during which they may have remained unexercised. It follows, then, as a natural deduction from these premises, that those who are totally blind from birth or early infancy, are the most liable, as a class, to fall below the proper standard of bodily vigor and development; while those are least so who suffer but a partial loss of vision, and that at a period of life which has afforded time and opportunity for a full measure of physical culture.

Now, when this subsequent deterioration is superadded to the original disabilities referred to as occasional accompaniments of blindness, which is not unfrequently the case, we have a class who are clearly the greatest sufferers of all. And it behooves the friends of humanity to exhaust every available means, in an effort to ameliorate their extremely unfortunate condition. It is in their unsuccessful labors with this class, that the educators of the blind find the burthen of their discouragements; and some of the least persevering of them are almost ready, at times, to yield to a feeling of despondency, and adopt the conclusion, that they have undertaken a hopeless task, in endeavoring to bring any considerable portion of their pupils up to the ordinary standard of physical and mental attainments. But this will not do. Such must bear in mind, that, even among those who are possessed of all their senses, there may always be found a large class, who are nearly or quite as far below the nominal standard as the small class of which we are speaking; and yet no one, who is himself in a proper mental condition to insure a rational judgment, thinks of giving up the whole human race, or any considerable portion of it, as hopelessly incompetent.

MEANS OF COUNTERACTION.

That the physical disabilities alluded to, whether connate or resulting from a condition of blindness, should be removed, so far as human agencies can accomplish such a result, is a matter that does not admit of a question. Every consideration demands it; not only the desirability of vigorous bodily health for its own sake, but that such is necessary in order that the brain shall perform its wonted functions in a proper manner, thus insuring "a sound mind in a sound body." To prove that very much can be done in the direction of preventing the evil effects adverted to, or removing them where they already exist, needs no elaborate argument here or elsewhere. If an enlightened course of hygienic treatment and systematic physical training, through the agency of some well digested course of gymnastic exercises, are found beneficial in the promotion of sound bodily health in seeing youth, in addition to the invigorating sports and occupations which are always accessible to them, how much more essential must those things be to the blind, who are debarred from the health imparting influences of these sports and occupations. While such means of physical culture are almost wholly neglected in many of our institutions, it is believed by the writer that they are not only practicable to the fullest extent, but that they form one of the most essential features of an enlightened course of instruction and training for the blind.

You will therefore pardon him, if, in this connection, occasion is taken to urge their imperative necessity upon the earnest attention of your Board.

MENTAL EFFECTS.

We come now to the most interesting, and perhaps the most difficult phase of our present subject, viz: the influence of blindness upon the development and operations of the mental faculties. And if, in order to a better understanding of the topic in hand, it is found necessary to take for examination, the most extreme cases, those who, being totally blind from birth, have had no opportunity for the natural unfolding of the faculties which depend for their operations upon the stimulus received through the medium of the visual sense, we must not fail to bear in mind, that such cases form but a small class, as compared with the whole number. The measure of the influence in question must, of course, be governed, in each individual case, by the age at which the blindness originates, and the degree of obscuration.

As was intimated, this subject is a difficult one at best, and the difficulty is greatly augmented by our inability to obtain accurate statistics. Therefore, in the present instance, we must resort, to some extent, to a priori reasoning, in order to a proper elucidation of the principles involved. It is confidently believed, however, from such observations as we have been able to make, that the facts in the case, will justify the conclusions arrived at.

It is laid down, as a fundamental proposition in the prevailing systems of mental philosophy, that the unfolding of the intellectual faculties, at least, is dependent upon the stimulus derived from the external world through the medium of the senses. In view of some of the phenomenal manifestations of the peculiar, spiritual organization which we denominate genius; the strict truth of this doctrine is sometimes deemed, in a slight degree, questionable; but, in the present state of knowledge, we cannot do better than receive it. At all events, to assume that the mind can grow into a condition of complete, harmonious action, with any one of its more important avenues to sensorial impressions closed, is to charge, that an All-wise Creator has endowed his creatures with a useless faculty.

There are those who, either through ignorance of the elementary principles of mental science, or from want of reflection, manifest great astonishment on discovering that a blind child is possessed of correct notions with regard to the form, dimensions and other tactual qualities of material objects, and straightway proceed to account for the phenomenon by declaring that the power which would have been exercised by the missing sense, had it been present, is mercifully distributed among the remaining ones. But this mode of reasoning, it is scarcely necessary to say, will not answer. Each sense has its especial function, and this function cannot be performed by another. True, after the particular notions which originally reach the mind through a given sense have been derived, through the functional operations of the appropriate organ of that sense, they may afterwards be cognizable by another sense, as acquired perceptions, but without the intervention of the special sense which forms the appropriate channel for the original conveyance of these notions to the mind, they never could reach it. Thus it is with regard to the notions of form, etc., just alluded to. In the absence of the tactual sense from birth, though the visual one be ever so perfect, they never could reach the mind; and so with the original cognitions of light and shade, which form the basis of acquired perceptions of the sense of sight. The mind must remain forever destitute of them, at least in its earthly state of existence, when that sense is missing. Hence it may be remarked, in passing, that the marvelous, unphilosophical stories which we sometimes hear, of certain blind persons being able to distinguish colors by touch, are utterly without foundation in truth. If, then, these premises are correct, while there is no just reason for astonishment at the blind child's possession of the kinds of knowledge before cited, there are, nevertheless, some notions of the qualities of material objects, of which he must remain essentially ignorant, and therefore his mental development must, in just so much, be unfavorably influenced. Now, it is a knowledge of the character and amount of this influence which we are, through our present inquiry, seeking to obtain, in the hope of being able to suggest some available means of counteracting it, so far as such a thing is possible.

The human soul, considered in its relationship to external nature, is sometimes beautifully likened to a musical instrument. "Regarded in itself, it is an invisible existence, having the capacity and elements of harmony." The senses, the brain and the nervous system generally, constitute the beautiful framework which the Creator has woven around its mysterious, invisible strings. This living instrument is, at first, voiceless and silent, but when it is properly wrought upon "by those outward influences which exist in the various forms and adaptations of the material world," it gives forth ravishing strains of exquisite harmony.

Now, when some of the finer chords of this wonderful instrument, those which carry the beautiful windings of the melody, and contribute their rich blendings of color, light and shade to the deep, swelling harmonies of its ceaseless hymn of praise, remain untouched, save but lightly, by the finger of nature, though no discords may result to mar the effect, yet there will be an absence of some of the parts necessary to that full, rich flood of harmony which alone can satisfy the perfect ear of Deity. And herein we find the sought for character of the influence referred to. Its amount will depend, first, upon the nicety with which the dormant strings are attuned to the rest, and their consequent susceptibility to sympathetic vibration, as in the manifestations of genius; and, secondly, upon the adaptedness of the means which may be employed by kind friends to counteract it.

But in order to present the matter in a clearer light, let us glance briefly at the operations of the sensorial faculties, or rather those of them which are sometimes denominated the intellectual senses, and trace the influence of these operations upon the more interior portions of the mental economy. To this end, and in order not to stray beyond the established limits of mental science, the following summary is made up, in great part, from the writings of acknowledged authorities upon the subject.

The sense of touch is the medium through which we derive our first notions of externality, or the existence of a world outside of ourselves. Without it, we could have no such notion. The cognitions of this sense are exceedingly definite and perfect. "By it we not only know that a quality exists, but also what it is. We have the knowledge, and we know what it is that produces it. In this manner the perceptions by touch lie at the foundation of all our knowledge of an external world. We rely upon them with more certainty than any other." Many of the qualities originally revealed to us by touch, are subsequently cognizable by sight as acquired perceptions. If, however, in any case, we have reason to doubt the evidence of sight, we instinctively apply to the sense of touch, in order to verify our visual judgment.

"The principal qualities cognized by touch, besides externality, are extension, hardness, softness, form, size, motion, situation and roughness or smoothness." Besides these, however, there are various bodily sensations of pain and pleasure, given by this sense, which it were useless to mention here.

"Conforming ourselves, therefore, to the perceptions of touch, we find that they are almost exclusively given us by the hand. In this manner we obtain a distinct knowledge of extension, of size, of hardness, softness and form. When the body is small, or the discrimination delicate, we rely almost wholly upon the perceptive power of the fingers. In this manner we obtain, experimentally, nearly all our knowledge of the primary qualities of bodies."

"We learn by a proper examination of the subject, that not only does this sense enable us to make large additions to our knowledge, but that it is really the original source of a great part of our knowledge of the world around us. Of its intrinsic importance, we may form an opinion from the fact that there is no case on record in which a human being has been born without it. By it alone, as in the case of Laura Bridgman, we may learn our relations to the world around us; may be taught the use of language, and may even acquire the power of writing it with considerable accuracy. This sense is lost only in paralysis, and in those cases in which the individual, drawing near to dissolution, has no further need of any of the organs of sense."

The conceptions of tangible qualities, like the perceptions of touch, are exceedingly definite. It is sometimes said that the blind, who rely exclusively upon this sense for their knowledge of external objects, can not form abstract conceptions of these, but must in all cases imagine themselves in immediate contact with the objects conceived. This, however, is a great mistake. Besides being inconsistent with the acknowledged principles of mental science, it is contradicted by observation and experience. Were such a view correct, it would be impossible for a person born blind to have any correct knowledge of distance, or of objects of great magnitude. Nor would he be able to derive information from descriptions of such objects as have never been brought within the reach of his tactual sense.

The sense of sight is, primarily, simple in its function. Nothing is original with it, but perceptions of light, and its various modifications denominated color. These perceptions, however, are exceedingly numerous. "In this respect, the intimations of the sense of sight stand on the same footing with those of taste and hearing. A part of that knowledge which we attribute to the sight, and which has the appearance of being immediate and original in that sense, is not so. Some of its alleged perceptions are properly the results of sensations, combined not only with the usual reference to an external cause, but also with various other acts of the judgment. In some cases, the combination of the acts of the judgment with the visual sensation is carried so far, that there is a sort of transfer to the sight, of the knowledge which has been obtained from some other source. And not unfrequently, in consequence of a long and tenacious association, we are apt to look upon the knowledge thus acquired as truly original in the seeing power." Thus it is with the cognitions of extension, figure or form, magnitude, solidity, distance, relative position and some others. These are all conveyed to the mind through certain dispositions of light and shade.

We are aware that there are not wanting respectable authorities who do not subscribe to the above restricted view of the original perceptions of sight, and who think that some of those which have been given as acquired perceptions, are possible to the mind, without the intervention of touch; but it would avail nothing to our present purpose to discuss the matter here, or give our reasons for adopting the views set forth. The conclusions sought to be arrived at, may be as legitimately drawn from the one theory as from the other. So long as it is admitted that the several cognitions referred to are attainable by the touch, and no one pretends to dispute the fact, it matters not, if any or all of them are equally attainable by sight, as original perceptions of that sense. In any view of the subject, it is clear, that the sense of sight adds very greatly, nay, almost indefinitely to the scope and powers of the mind, in gathering into its storehouse, those materials from the external world which are necessary to its growth and harmonious development. The possession of this sense, besides the inexhaustable fund of enjoyment it affords, through the endless combinations of color, light and shade, may be regarded as an almost immeasurable extension of the tactual sense, taking in a wide spread field of knowledge at once, or so nearly so that it amounts to the same thing, reaching out to great distances, grasping objects of immense magnitude, and discerning bodies of exceeding minuteness.

The sense of hearing is also simple in its function, giving rise only to perceptions of sound, but these in an endless variety, equal in extent to those of light and color originating in the visual sense. All of the numberless sounds of nature, animate and inanimate; all of the infinite number of tones which enter into the composition of music; all of the countless sounds of the human voice, in their endless variety of pitch, force, duration and combination, employed as the elements of spoken language, are cognized by the mind as original perceptions of this sense. But hearing also has its acquired perceptions. Through it we learn of magnitude, distance, position, motion, and other qualities pertaining to sonorous bodies; and in this respect, so far as it goes, it bears a close resemblance to the sense of sight.

There are also other points of resemblance in the senses of sight and hearing, which are not often, if at all, alluded to in works on mental science, but which possess sufficient interest to be worthy of mention here. The first of these to which attention will be directed, is, that in all minds, albeit, some may lack a definite consciousness of the truth of the assertion, perceptions and conceptions of sound, particularly the latter, are endowed with the attributes of extension, form, color, position, motion, and, we had almost said, magnitude. As evidence of this, we will cite the circumstance, that in every language may be found numerous qualifying words, relating to visible objects, which apply with equal significance to sounds, thus indicating an intuitive recognition of the fact alluded to. For example, in our own language, we say of sounds, as indicating extension, form and magnitude, that they are broad, full, deep, slender, thin, shallow, acute, obtuse, great, small, long, short, increasing, diminishing, &c.; as indicating position, that they are here, there, high, low, near, distant, elevated, depressed, &c.; as indicating motion, that they are slow, rapid, approaching, receding, retarded, accelerated, rising, falling, trembling, shaking, waving, meandering, winding, undulating, &c.; and as indicating color, light and shade, in general terms, that they are bright, dull, brilliant, faint, clear, obscure, lively, sombre, grave, distinct, shadowy, &c.

This proposition is, we assert, undoubtedly true of all minds, so far as it has just been elucidated. But there are those who go still farther, and attribute to sounds, or at least associate with them, every known variety of shade and color, and we doubt not that such would be found universally true, if all could accurately analyze their mental operations. We talk about harmony of colors, as well as harmony of sounds; and all understand instinctively what is meant. And inharmony of colors is as offensive to the eye, as inharmony of sounds to the ear. The entire musical world recognize the truth of the principle in question, and talk as freely of color, light and shade, in reference to sound, as does the painter in reference to his visible pictures, and many of our finest musical compositions are intended to represent visible objects and scenes. The seven tones of the diatonic scale are said by all to correspond with the seven colors of the prismatic scale, and the harmonic triad of the former with the three primary colors of the latter. The chromatic scale derives its name from the suggestion of color.

In exemplification of the foregoing remarks, we beg leave to insert here the following extract from Gardner's Music of Nature, an English work of some celebrity:

"Every one who has attentively listened to sounds, must have noticed, that besides their acuteness and gravity, loudness or softness, shape and figure, there is another quality belonging to them, which musicians have agreed to denominate color. The answer of the blind man, who, on being asked what idea he had of scarlet, replied that it was like the sound of a trumpet, is less absurd than may at first be apprehended. If, as Sir Isaac Newton supposed, the impulse upon the nerves of the eye, produced by color, is similar in kind or degree to that produced upon the ear by sounds, the impression upon the sensorium, or seat of sensation in the brain, will probably be the same, or so nearly so, that the ideas of the respective external objects will be associated in the mind. According to this theory, the different musical instruments may be characterized by correspondent colors, so as to be fancifully classed in the following manner:

WIND INSTRUMENTS.

Trombone—deep red.

Flute—sky blue.

Trumpet—scarlet.

Diapason—deeper blue.

Clarionette—Orange.

Double Diapason—purple.

Oboe—Yellow.

Horn—Violet.

Bassoon (Alto)—deep yellow.

STRINGED INSTRUMENTS.

Violin—Pink.

Violincello—Red.

Viola—Rose.

Double Bass—deep crim. red.

In addition to what the preceding scale expresses, let it be understood, that the lowest notes of each instrument partake of the darkest shades of its color, and as they ascend they become of a lighter hue."

In the above extract, the author speaks of the matter as fanciful, though he does not appear to think so in reality; and, we doubt not, there are many others who will be ready to characterize it as a fanciful notion. But, for our own part, we are strongly inclined to the opinion that its source will be found, on proper investigation, to lie deep down among the fundamental principles of nature, far below the regions of fancy. It is, at least, a note-worthy coincidence, that Mr. Gardner's "fanciful scale" should tally so completely as it does with the experience of many others who have been consulted upon the subject.

Again, secondly, the sensations of light and sound, unlike those of taste and touch, have their origin in bodies not in contact with the sentient organs of the percipient, and are each transmitted through space, by vibrations of an elastic medium; which circumstance gives rise to several interesting analogies. For example, a reflected image is to the visual sense what an echo is to the hearing; and pictorial representations have their counterpart in ventriloquism. The one represents distance by diminution of size and faintness of outline and color, while the other produces the same effect by diminution of sound and indistinctness of utterance.

Thirdly, the laws which govern the phenomena of light and sound, the immediate objective perceptions of the senses of sight and hearing, are almost identical, and serve to illustrate each other. So that the teacher of the blind may, through the principles of acoustics, which are entirely within the comprehension of his pupils, convey to the minds of the latter a tolerably correct notion of the principles of optics. True, he cannot give to the born blind a proper idea of the intrinsic nature of light itself, but he may give them such a knowledge of the scientific principles governing its phenomena as will enable them to instruct those who see. It is well known, that the celebrated Saunderson was a successful teacher in optics as well as in mathematics. Let the fundamental notion of light, in the mind of the blind teacher, be ever so wide of the truth, he cannot lead the seeing pupil astray, even though the positive experience of the latter should not come to his aid. For, whatever that notion be, he has derived it from the language of positive experience, and must use the same correct language in giving expression to his own thoughts.

It may be, that we have dwelt longer upon the topic of these interesting analogies between the senses of sight and hearing, than its importance demands; but we have thought that, if properly wrought out, it might have a useful bearing upon the general subject in hand; and have therefore ventured to throw out a few hints for the reflection of those interested in the discussion of such subjects. We do not, of course, expect to be able to substitute hearing for sight. All we aim at is to ascertain whether or not there is anything to be found in the direction indicated, which will enable us to reach, by indirect means, some of the mental powers which are stunted in their growth through lack of the stimulus ordinarily derived from the external world, through the channel afforded by the visual sense.

Having thus sketched the operations of the three principal sensorial faculties, as proposed, it now remains to advert to the combined influence of these operations upon the more interior departments of the mental economy, and then, if possible, point out what must be the true condition of the mind, when the important factor of sight is left out of the calculation. To do justice to this part of our task, however, would require more space than we have allotted to it; but we will endeavor, in a few general remarks, to indicate the drift of our argument.

We started out with the proposition, that the unfolding of the mind is dependent upon the stimulus of impressions from the material world, received through the channel of the senses; and essayed to point out the character of the respective impressions conveyed by each of the several senses examined. As the constituent elements of food are assimilated by the body, and contribute to the growth of its different organs, so it is with those sensorial impressions and the cognitions to which they give rise, in their influence upon the mind. They form its appropriate aliment, some being assimilated by one of its powers, and some by another. Thus are called into action the faculties of perception, conception, consciousness, attention, reflection, original suggestion, abstraction, association, memory, judgment, reasoning, imagination, taste, etc., in the department of the intellect; and the various emotions, desires, and affections, natural and moral, in that of the sensibilities.

Without attempting to measure the precise amount of the influence contributed by each particular sense, in the promotion of mental growth, it may be said, in general terms, that the degree of development will depend upon the quantity, as well as the nature and variety of the aliment supplied. Now, we have seen that as to nature and variety, the simple cognitions furnished by the sense of touch, are, with the exception of light, shade, and color, precisely the same as those furnished by sight, so that there is really but a small class of such cognitions shut out from the mind in the closing of the avenue afforded by the sense of vision; and it is also evident that such class is not essential to at least a partial growth of all of the faculties enumerated above. Without the organ of vision, the mind may have an infinite variety of perceptions and conceptions, simple and complex; it may group its conceptions in numberless combinations, thus enjoying the benefits and pleasures of imagination; it may have a consciousness of its own energies and operations, and give its attention to whatever is passing within or without itself; it may have its original suggestions of a great first cause, of right and wrong, of self existence, personal identity, succession, duration, time, eternity, space, power, and the like; it may abstract, associate, and classify such cognitions as it possesses, store them up in its memory, judge of their relations, reflect and reason upon them, etc.; it may exercise its power of taste, and enjoy the pleasures of aesthetic qualities in surrounding objects, so far as they are perceptible to the remaining senses; it may feel emotions of pleasure and pain, possess desire, and experience the various passions and affections which are the natural endowments of all human souls. In what, then, it may be asked, consists the loss sustained by the absence of vision? Mainly, in the quantity of knowledge derived from the faculty of perception, especially that kind of knowledge which ministers to the development of the aesthetic sense, and the ready appreciation and use of figurative language.

We say, mainly in quantity of knowledge, because the notions which are derived exclusively from the operations of the visual sense, are extremely limited in number. It is through the acquired perceptions of sight that very much of the knowledge which is attainable through the other senses, by a slow and difficult process, is gathered into the mental store-house with superior facility, and hence, in greater profusion. It was said, in another place, that the sense of sight might well be regarded as an almost indefinite extension of the tactual sense in the results of its operations. But, in addition to the greatly enhanced number and variety of simple cognitions received in a given time through sight, there are many complex ones which can never be received through touch as immediate perceptions, but must be conveyed to the mind mediately, through tangible representations, or the slow process of verbal description, and apprehended through the agency of the conceptive power.

The superiority of the former sense, as a channel for the conveyance of objective knowledge to the mind, after the latter sense has developed its capacity for the reception of such knowledge, may be estimated by a comparison of the extended horizon bounding the wide-spread field of vision, with the limited one of the tactual sense, whose radius is but an arm's length.

Now, if we consider the character of most of the knowledge received through the intimations of sight, we will readily appreciate the influence of the absence of that sense upon the development of the faculty of taste, and hence, upon the æsthetic department of the mind. Most of the refinement of the æsthetic sense ordinarily derived from a critical study of the beautiful productions of the fine arts, and all of that received from a direct contemplation of the objects and varied scenes of the visible creation with their endless combinations of form, motion, color, light and shade is lost to the soul; and hence, the comparative silence of the finer strings of the wonderful instrument to which it was likened in a previous paragraph. Even in the departments of music and poetry, the only fine arts accessible to the sightless, we find indications of the lack of a full, complete development of the faculty of taste, in all of their born-blind votaries. This remark applies, however, with the most force, to the descriptive parts of music and poetry. In the passional delineations of these arts, the blind are usually more happy in their renderings. When a more complete system of education for them shall be instituted and carried out, one having especial reference to the department of the mind which most feels the loss of the visual sense, it is believed that a great improvement may be effected in this direction.

In the matter of language, too, as intimated above, blindness interposes a serious disability, which calls for the intervention of direct, special means for its removal, so far as such a result is attainable. We do not allude to the language of every day life, to that of the ordinary arts and sciences, or, indeed, to the more literal part of language, in whatever direction it may be employed; but to the figurative portion, which belongs more particularly to æsthetics. The correctness of this statement will be apparent, when it is borne in mind that a very large proportion of our choicest words and figures of speech derive their existence, and hence their beauty and significance, from visible objects. True, there have been many blind persons, in all ages and countries, who have acquired more or less distinction as poetical writers; but it will be found on examination, we think, that all such have either enjoyed the privileges of sight at some time during their lives, or their finest productions are such as do not call for the use of figurative language derived from visual perceptions. Milton, the prince of modern poets, as is well known, did not lose his sight until over forty years of age; while Blacklock, whose poetry will not bear the test of severe criticism in the direction indicated, became blind in very early infancy.

In the affectional department of the mind, we likewise find that the absence of vision has, in some respects, an untoward influence. The powers of the soul, cut off to so large an extent from direct communication with the outer world, and the equipoising influence of objective attractions, naturally concentrate upon its more interior experiences, and find their chief solace in subjective contemplation. Hence is promoted an abnormal development of some of the sensibilities. Perhaps the most notable example of this may be seen in a strongly marked tendency to unhealthy sentimentality. Other examples might be cited, but they will readily suggest themselves to the student of human nature. We may be permitted to say upon this head, however, that care must be observed not to draw too general conclusions from a few extreme cases that may be met with, in which some of the less exalted attributes of the passional nature are found unduly prominent. Our own experience will not warrant the assumption that a school of blind youths differs from any other, in this latter regard. Nevertheless, it is not improbable that with adults who have been allowed to grow up without the refining influences of education and advantageous association, the case is somewhat different.

MORAL EFFECTS.

Under this head but little need be written. The general remarks embodied in the latter portion of the preceding paragraph will be found to apply with equal force here. We know of no reason why, all other things being equal, the moral status of the blind should differ from that of the seeing; for we are firm in the opinion that the moral sentiments spring from a source too deep to be materially affected by the accident of physical blindness.

We can not pass from our present topic, the unfavorable effects of blindness, without again reminding the reader that we have been discussing an extreme class; those whose blindness is both congenital and total. We would also repeat, in substance, the remark heretofore made, that the measure of the influence treated of will, in all cases, depend upon the degree of blindness and the period of life at which it originates. Nor would we have it forgotten that, even in this extreme class, may be found many remarkable exceptions to the general rules laid down. Did our space permit, it would be a pleasant task to refer to some of the most notable of these. But we must pass on.

COMPENSATION.

We come now to a more encouraging phase of our subject. As a partial compensation for the loss of the visual sense we find that the usefulness of the others is enhanced by the unusual amount of exercise given them. Not so much that their original perceptions are improved in refinement and accuracy, though this is true in a marked degree, as that the sphere of their acquired perception is greatly enlarged. We also find that the conceptive power, in its application to the perceptions of the remaining senses, is considerably augmented by the increased dependence upon it in the mind's efforts to gain objective knowledge. And if this is true of the conceptive power, it must also be true of the imagination to an equal extent.

In elucidation of the remark just made in reference to the increased power of conception and imagination, we may allude to the readiness manifested by the blind in apprehending intelligent descriptions of objects beyond the reach of their tactual sense, and the tenacity with which those descriptions are retained in memory; also to the facility they acquire in understanding the whole of a complex object when only a part is accessible to them, or the whole of a description when only a portion of it is given; as does the naturalist who constructs an entire specimen of animated nature from a single part. And here we may derive a useful hint in the preparation of a proper course of instruction and training for the pupils of our institutions.

As instances of the acquired perceptions of touch and hearing, of which the blind learn to avail themselves to a greater degree than others in the acquisition of knowledge, we will cite the following:

1. Through tactual impressions, made by reverberations of the intervening atmosphere, upon the face and other exposed parts of the person, as well as through auditory impressions, made by reverberations of sound, the proximity of objects is readily perceived; and by close attention to these intimations of the senses of touch and hearing, the blind are enabled to walk without a guide through the most crowded thoroughfares; also to estimate the size of an apartment with some degree of accuracy, together with the number and character of the objects it contains.

2. Through the form and pressure of the hand, when grasped or laid upon the person, and through the sound of the voice, the foot-step or even the breathing of an acquaintance, he is easily recognized by a blind person of delicate perceptions.

3. The age, disposition, size and nationality of a person, may be estimated with nearly or quite as much accuracy through the sound of the voice, as they are by the eye, through physiognomical and other indications.

4. Also, through the suggestions of sound, may be ascertained the substance, magnitude, form, location, motion, and other circumstances pertaining to objects. By the tone of a bell, we learn its size, as well as what it is, and so of other sonorous bodies; we can tell whether they are metallic or otherwise, whether they are hollow, solid, thick, thin, etc.; by striking upon a cask or other hollow body, we can tell whether it is full or empty; by striking or walking upon the floor of a room, we may learn whether it is furnished or unfurnished; by the sound of moving bodies, we ascertain their distance from us, and whether they are approaching or receding, and so on, almost ad infinitum. By attention to the innumerable sounds which salute the ear on every hand, the blind receive intimations which escape the seeing.

It is believed that if all, or any considerable number of our acquired perceptions of the character of the foregoing, could be properly collected, arranged and classified, they might form a valuable aid to the teacher of the blind, in his efforts to provide appropriate substitutes for visual perceptions.

MEANS OF COUNTERACTION AND INSTRUCTION.

Having in the foregoing division of our subject endeavored to set forth in a plain way, the most palpable influences of blindness upon the physical and mental economy, it is proper that we should next consider some of the means which are best calculated to counteract those influences, as well as the most appropriate system of instruction to be pursued in the education of those who are bereft of the visual sense. But the prescribed limits of a paper like this, do not admit of an extended discussion of the topic in question. We must, therefore, content ourselves with a few general remarks upon each of the more important points involved.

As a general, fundamental proposition, it may be laid down, that the education of the blind should, in every possible respect, conform to that of the seeing; and, as a corollary therefrom, that the same means should be employed in the one case as in the other, so far as they may be found applicable. In reference to the qualification contained in the propositions just enunciated, it may be remarked, that an intelligent consideration of the subject, will show less difference between the two cases than is generally supposed. The necessary modifications in some of the mechanical appliances, and the employment of special means in a few directions, to meet the requirements of the blind scholar, do not effect the general principles involved in the matter of education. If these truths are kept steadily in view, little more need be said here, than is necessary to call attention to some of the special means hinted at.

PHYSICAL TRAINING.

Upon this head, we have already ventured a few remarks in reference to appropriate provisions for counteracting the effects of blindness upon the bodily powers. To these, we will only add, that no institution is complete in its appointments, without a commodious gymnasium and other necessary appliances for thorough physical culture. Nothing more in this regard is demanded for the blind, than is deemed necessary for the seeing. But that the former need such helps incomparably more than the latter, is too palpable a truth too need enlarging upon.

OBJECT TEACHING.

In schools for the seeing, appliances for object teaching are coming to be considered as a prime necessity. Now, if we but consider for a moment the vastly inferior advantages of the blind child as compared with those of the seeing one, in the acquisition of objective knowledge, we cannot fail to see that the needs of the former in this direction also, infinitely transcend those of the latter. Very many of the objects most familiar to the seeing, in their daily pursuits, escape the notice of the blind, without their attention is called by some lucky circumstance especially to them. Moreover, many of these objects are, in consequence of their position or great magnitude, inaccessible to the fingers of the latter. Still further, the innumerable pictorial representations which daily meet the eye of the seeing child, are hidden from the sightless one. These, and many other similar considerations, plainly suggest the necessity, in every school for the blind, of an extensive cabinet of specimens from the domains of nature and art. By this means we may greatly increase the quantity and variety of perceptive cognitions, and thereby do very much toward counteracting the evil effects of blindness by promoting the development of the more interior faculties of the mind, as was before shown to be needed. Such a cabinet should contain a variety of mineral and metallic substances; specimens and models of the products of the vegetable kingdom as well as that of animated nature; a human skeleton, and representations of the different organs of the body, as well as skeletons of the types of different orders of animals; representative busts of the different races of men, and of distinguished individuals; models of noted buildings, showing their constituent elements of architecture, with their several combinations into the different orders; models of marine architecture, showing the different classes of vessels; models of the various implements, machines and devices in general use, such as pumps, water wheels, steam engines, etc.; tangible representations of interesting natural features, such as the Falls of Niagara, and of others where the beauties of nature and art are combined, as in the Central Park of New York City; models of noted statues, monuments, etc.; and a variety of other similar objects. Such a collection would admit of indefinite extension, and each article added to it would increase its usefulness just so much. Every college of note, for the seeing, has its cabinet of natural specimens, at least, and why should not an institution for the blind have one also? True, it would involve some additional expense; but if expense is a secondary consideration in the education of the seeing, with all their natural advantages, why should it not be so in the education of the blind?

What cannot be said in favor of the prime necessity of the employment of such special means in the instruction of a class of persons who, being deprived of the important sense of vision, must depend upon the circumscribed powers of the remaining ones for the acquisition of their objective knowledge. Think you, but for a moment, upon the far reaching scope of the mind, through the medium of the visual sense, gathering into its never filled storehouse, almost at a single impulse, a specific knowledge of the countless objects embraced within the horizon of the beholder, and contrast this extended view with the blind child's contracted horizon, whose radius terminates at his finger ends, and whose area is but slowly traversed by his tactual sense. You will then begin to realize the necessity of bringing within his reach the many objects which would otherwise be inaccessible to him, and wonder, not at our asking for so much to aid him in his search after objective knowledge, but rather at the marvelous results of his slow, patient toiling after the mental aliment which is acquired by you with so little effort. Perchance, too, you will find here fresh cause to admire the beneficence of that compensating law by which Divine mercy "tempers the wind to the shorn lamb."

INTELLECTUAL TRAINING.

It is hardly necessary to say, that the course of study and drill for the promotion of this object should be most carefully prepared, and thoroughly carried out. Every exercise should have a specific aim, in the production of a full, well-balanced development of all of the intellectual powers. Judicious training, in this regard, is even more necessary with the blind, than with the seeing.

Passing over most of the elementary branches, as claiming no special comment, other than the trite one, that they should be thoroughly mastered as a foundation for future progress, a few suggestions will be offered in reference to the peculiar adaptedness of certain studies to meet the requirements of the case before us:

1. As the first of these, we will mention geography; not the political department of that science, but the physical, in its most extended scope. Treating so largely, as it does, of objective knowledge, it is peculiarly fitted to do an important work in training the perceptive and conceptive faculties, as well as in filling the void created in the mind by the absence of the sense mostly employed in the gathering of such knowledge. The cabinet above referred to would contain many objects well calculated to facilitate the pursuit of this study. In the preparation of globes and maps it should be deemed imperative that they represent, in relief, as nearly as possible, the physical features of the earth's surface. Few of those now in use are thus constructed, and the consequence is, that, despite the efforts of the best teachers, their pupils acquire very incorrect notions upon the subject in question.

2. To natural philosophy and the physical sciences generally the foregoing remarks will apply with equal propriety. All serve to store the mind with objective knowledge, and thereby aid in counteracting its tendency to undue abstraction and subjective contemplation. Most of the philosophical and other scientific apparatus in general use, can, with slight modifications, be successfully employed in the instruction of the blind.

But for the science of botany, in addition to what has just been said of the natural sciences in general, something more may be claimed. With an intelligent application of its principles, on the part of the teacher, it may be made eminently subservient in the development of the æsthetic sense. The beautiful forms and adaptations of the vegetable kingdom, independently of color, are so numerous and varied, and at the same time so palpable to the touch, that they constitute a wide and interesting field for the exercise of the perceptive faculties of the blind student. This branch is not usually taught in institutions for the blind, but our own experiments with several classes have demonstrated to us, at least, its importance as one of the regular branches of the course.

3. Thus far we have spoken only of those branches whose principal aim is the training of the faculties of perception and conception, and the enlargement of the mind's store of objective cognitions.

We now pass to such as aid in the cultivation of the more interior class of faculties, whose office it is to analyze, compare, arrange, classify, combine, and reason upon the relations of these cognitions, together with those of original suggestion. And, among the branches in question, we may be permitted to mention those of mathematics and mental philosophy as claiming an important position in a proper course of instruction. Much attention is usually given to the first of these branches in our best institutions, and the results obtained are highly satisfactory, in themselves considered. But in the comparative neglect of most of the departments of study previously referred to, it is found that the minds of their pupils are unevenly developed; and, if there is any truth in the statement sometimes made, that educated blind persons are unusually prone to skepticism, it may be traced to this cause.

Of the usefulness of mathematics in general, as an agent for disciplining the mental powers, nothing need be said with especial reference to the education of the blind; but for the particular science of geometry we would claim a peculiar adaptedness to our work. Properly taught, especially without the use of diagrams after the elements have been mastered, it proves a valuable aid in the cultivation of the conceptive power, and hence the facility of acquiring knowledge through the medium of verbal descriptions. This will be obvious when it is borne in mind that, in the absence of diagrams in relief, the pupil must construct imaginary ones for himself, and with the mind's eye, as it were, trace out the position and relations of their various parts in studying and reciting his demonstrations. The most complicated figures may be successfully drawn, in this way, upon the mental blackboard of the student, and tenaciously retained there. This process is often carried to such an extent, by the blind mathematician, as to excite the wonder of those who habituate themselves to the use of visible diagrams. From this general statement of the case it is trusted that the value of the science of geometry, in the education of the blind, will be duly appreciated.

4. From what has already been said, in the foregoing pages the importance of thorough, systematic instruction in the science of language will be manifest without an extended discussion of the subject in this connection. It is not sufficient to teach the elementary principles of English grammar, but the philosophy of language in its broadest sense must be inculcated if we would truly educate the pupils of our institutions. The departments of rhetoric and composition must receive especial attention if we would, to any considerable extent, supply the void consequent upon the absence of sight, as heretofore explained. It is believed that, with judicious preparation in the way of instruction and training, blind persons may become successful teachers in language. As to the descriptive parts of it, however, the same remarks will apply, to some extent, as were made in connection with the subject of teaching optics.

5. Music, properly taught, constitutes, perhaps, the most effective agent hitherto employed for the cultivation of the æsthetic faculty in persons bereft of sight; but in order to make it in any large degree successful, as such agent, it must be thoroughly taught as to principles, as well as practice. No mere smattering of either the art or science of music will answer. But, beside the usefulness of this one of the fine arts, in an educational point of view, the profession of music offers to the educated blind, who are possessed of the requisite natural endowments as well as acquired attainments for its successful prosecution, one of the most available means for self maintenance; and this circumstance offers an additional reason of great weight for its being taught in our institutions in the most thorough manner possible. Numerous examples throughout the civilized world of marked success in the prosecution of music as a profession, notwithstanding the æsthetic conditions hinted at in a previous section, might be cited, but we lack space for reference to any of them.

In addition to music, there are undoubtedly other means of equal efficiency, or nearly so, for the promotion of the end in question, were they properly applied. We have already mentioned the study of botany in this connection, and would add to it the proper study of rhetoric, as well as a critical examination and study of appropriate objects which might be furnished by a well stocked cabinet of the kind mentioned above. The relation of botany to rhetoric, as a source of the most beautiful similes and metaphors, will readily appear upon reflection.

Again, in connection with the study of rhetoric, a thorough and systematic drill in the application of the principles of criticism to poetical compositions of a high order, especially those involving figures derived from visible objects, would be found exceedingly beneficial in the development of the faculty of taste. From our own experiments in this direction, we are satisfied with the correctness of the view just expressed. In order to reap all the advantages possible from this feature of the course of æsthetic training, however, the pupils should be required to memorize the compositions criticised. Moreover, the exercise should not be confined to the advanced pupils, but practiced with the youngest also, care being taken in all cases to select compositions which are adapted to the capacity of the learner. In addition to the advantage just claimed for this exercise, there are others which are worthy of consideration. One of these we may be permitted to state, and that is that it will add largely to the vocabulary of those who engage in it, and greatly improve the character of their language, as well as their readiness in its use.

In view of the effect of blindness upon the æsthetic department of the mind, as set forth in another portion of this communication, it is believed that too much value can not be attached to any means which may be found productive of good results in the direction of its eradication. Even in the department of music, the special fine art of the blind, marked improvement would be experienced by a more general cultivation of the æsthetic sense.

MORAL TRAINING.

As there seems to be nothing in the nature of blindness, per se, which necessarily affects the moral status of persons who are afflicted with it, we need not tarry to discuss this subject here. The moral training which is best adapted to seeing youth is equally well adapted to the blind.

MECHANICAL TRAINING.

The aim of the present section of this paper being the discussion of the mental bearings of the subject in hand, we may be allowed to pass over this head without comment here.

CLASSIFICATION.

One more topic we would advert to in this connection, and that will be dismissed with a few general remarks. We started out with the proposition that the education of the blind should conform, in every possible respect, to that of the seeing. Now, while ordinary schools are systematically graded, most, if not all, of our institutions for the blind are without this important feature. On the contrary, young and old, beginners and advanced pupils, are taught in the same school, and mainly subjected to the same regime. It is clear that, until we imitate the example of good schools for the seeing in this regard, we can not be said to comply with the requirements of the proposition referred to.

The foregoing reflections have been recorded in the hope that they may call attention to the general subject of blindness and the best means for removing the disabilities it imposes, in some different aspects from those which usually present themselves to the teacher. If, on account of the limited space afforded by a communication of the kind, some of the views involved may have been stated in too general terms for ready apprehension, it is believed that a little reflection will make manifest their correctness, and enable the intelligent reader to follow out the trains of thought suggested.

INCIDENTAL EFFECTS.

Thus far we have treated mainly of the intrinsic effects of blindness upon the human faculties, separately considered; but there are certain general influences exerted upon the powers of the individual, in their collective capacity, which may properly be termed incidental effects. Two or three of these we will advert to:

1. There are divers personal habits which the congenitally blind are liable to contract, and which are often the subject of comment. Without specifying any of these we will simply remark that they are such as naturally arise from the circumstance that such persons are placed, in some degree, beyond the influence of example. Human beings are imitative creatures, and when one happens to be isolated from the rest, which is, in effect, the case of a blind person with regard to the matter before us, it is not strange that he should be found to acquire some eccentricities of demeanor. With proper pains, however, these may be readily corrected.

2. Upon the general character blindness is liable to exert a depressing influence, the prevention of which calls for special care on the part of the sufferers themselves, as well as those who are entrusted with their education. With the born blind, and those who are afflicted in early life before the character has had time to form, there is apt to exist a lack of that full, harmonious development all of the powers which constitutes a true manly or womanly character, in the broad sense of the term; while with those who lose their sight in after years there is also a marked tendency toward depreciation in this regard.

This may not be a very palatable truth to the subjects of it, but we are nevertheless constrained to give it utterance, in the hope of stimulating them and their friends to energetic effort for the prevention of the disability referred to. The task is not a hopeless one, excepting under very unfavorable conditions, but it calls for perseverance and energy in order to its accomplishment. Moreover, the prize, when obtained, will prove invaluable as an aid to success in whatever sphere of life may be adopted. It is not sufficient to be well skilled in any art or profession in order to insure success; but there must be a certain force of character, a high toned self-reliance which commands respect and confidence, in order to make available any amount of knowledge or skill.

Blind persons often complain bitterly of distrust on the part of those whose patronage they seek, and seem to be impressed with a feeling that there is a universal disposition to withhold any encouragement of their efforts, in fact, to actually throw obstacles in their way because of their affliction. They may be well educated in certain directions, able to perform properly what they propose to undertake, and yet fail to elicit full confidence. But it never occurs to such that the cause of this failure may be with themselves. They attribute it to a want of appreciation on the part of others. Now, it is believed that in all such cases will be found an absence of the important qualification to which allusion has been made, i. e., the manifestation of a properly developed character, such as naturally results from the hardy training, direct and incidental, experienced by seeing persons.

The cause of the deficiency in question with those who have never experienced the benefit of sight, may be traced to the peculiar training, or rather want of training, to which they are subject during the period of life when their character should be forming. In order to make ourselves the better understood, allow us to trace briefly the history of a blind child as he is ordinarily circumstanced.

Born with his infirmity, or losing his sight in childhood, he is early taught the lesson of dependence by his anxious and too indulgent parents, who, while his more fortunate companions are allowed to roam the fields and woods in gleesome frolic, or join in the wonted invigorating sports of youth, confine him to the chimney corner, or at most the limited range of the door yard, lest some harm may befall him. He is seldom allowed to act, or even think, for himself, for his every want is anticipated. He is constantly reminded of his misfortune by being told in pitying accents of the beauty and sublimity of the earth beneath, with its endless variety and combinations of form and color, upon which all may gaze but himself; or of the heavens above, whose myriads of shining worlds shed in vain for him their brilliant rays, and traverse the limitless regions of space in matchless harmony. He is rendered morbidly sensitive by the ill-judged remarks made in his presence by those who forget that he has ears to hear for a heart to feel. He is indulged in every whim or caprice and allowed to commit with impunity a thousand acts for which another child would be reproved. While his seeing companions are sent to school, or are engaged in some useful occupation, he is taught to regard himself as incapacitated for either, and is left to brood over his deprivation with serious distrust of the justice and mercy of a God who permits him to be thus afflicted without apparent cause.

The result of all this is, if steps are not early taken to place him in a position where he may be surrounded by more salutary influences, that he arrives at the age of manhood in a very different condition from that of his seeing brother. His bodily and mental powers are comparatively dormant, if not positively injured, from want of exercise, he is a prey to despondency, with sensibilities painfully acute and disposition often soured by excessive indulgence; and, in fine, he lacks that sturdy, self-reliant character which belongs to other persons of the same age. The truth is he has learned to regard himself as a poor unfortunate who must not put forth a single effort of body or mind to help himself, and therefore feels that it is the business of the rest of the world to minister to his comfort and pleasure. And allow us to say in this connection, that in the reformation of his character in this respect, when sent to school, consists the most difficult and laborious part of his instructor's labors. It is, moreover, the most important; for, until this is effected, but little progress can be made in the acquisition of knowledge.

The remedy for this unfortunate condition will readily suggest itself, in view of the principle we are striving to inculcate in this communication. Subject your blind children, as far as possible, to the same influences which develop in your seeing ones, those traits of character which constitute the true man or woman. In this way and no other, will the desired end be attained.

The depreciation spoken of, to which those are liable who lose their sight after the character is formed to a greater or less extent, arises mainly from their withdrawing themselves from their wonted contact with the world around them. Smitten with misfortune at a time when their plans of life have already taken shape, the whole current of their thoughts and feelings is checked for the time being, and must, they imagine, seek an entirely new direction. Unaccustomed to their altered condition; they find themselves embarrassed by the impediments which it offers to a ready pursuit of their former occupations and pastimes, and begin to draw unfavorable comparisons between themselves and others who are not thus afflicted, not unfrequently imagining that the latter look down upon them with contemptuous pity on account of their self assumed inferiority. The result is, they become timid, sensitive, shy of their fellow beings, and disposed to retire within themselves to brood over their misfortune. Like Milton, in his "Sampson Agonistes," they exclaim in the bitterness of despair:—

“ Oh! loss of sight, of thee I most complain!
 Blind among enemies, O, worse than chains,
 Dungeon, or beggary, or decrepit age!
 Light, the prime work of God, to me's extinet,
 And all her various objects of delight
 Annull'd which might in part my grief have eas'd, Inferior to the vilest now become
 Of man or worm, the vilest here excel me;
 They creep, yet see, I dark in light exposed
 To daily fraud, contempt, abuse, and wrong,
 Within doors, or without. Still as a fool
 In power of others, never in my own;
 Scarce half I seem to live, dead more than half.
 O dark, dark, dark amid the blaze of noon,
 Irrecoverably dark, total eclipse
 Without all hope of day!
 O first created beam and thou great Word,
 ' Let there be light, and light was over all;'
 Why am I thus bereav'd thy prime decree?
 The sun to me is dark
 And silent as the moon,
 When she deserts the night,
 Hid in her vacant interlunar cave.”

The longer this self-imposed isolation, and this giving way to despondency are indulged in, the more damaging will be the effect upon the characters of the sufferers; and it behooves those whose duty or pleasure it is to ameliorate their condition, to use all possible means for bringing them back into the ordinary walks of life, where they may feel the strengthening influences derived from immediate contact with society in its various relations of business and recreation.

3. Blindness interposes a serious obstacle to the convenient pursuit of most of the employments and occupations of mankind. This point needs no elucidation at our hands; for it is not only self-evident, but there is a natural and almost universal disposition to exaggerate the magnitude of the obstacle interposed. It should rather be our business, then, to reduce its apparent size to those who are without experience with the blind.

There are, as is well known, numerous manual arts of a simple character, which are readily acquired by nearly all blind persons of either sex, and successfully pursued as a means of livelihood. The profession of music too, and a variety of literary occupations, likewise afford an appropriate field for such as possess proper talents for engaging in those pursuits. But in addition to what are usually considered as employments, especially adapted to persons who are bereft of sight, there are numerous others which have been found accessible to individuals of peculiar endowments natural and acquired. Indeed, there can scarcely be named, any profession, literary, mechanical or otherwise, in which some one or more blind persons have not distinguished themselves; and we venture the opinion, that when our educational facilities for the blind shall become such as they ought to be, there will be found for them, a much more extended field of employment than has hitherto been supposed to exist. What has already been accomplished by some, must certainly be possible to others under like favorable conditions.

We learn of blind preachers, doctors, and lawyers; blind sculptors, poets and musicians, the latter including composers, as well as performers upon every variety of instruments; blind teachers, professors and lecturers in every department of Science and Literature; blind writers upon Mathematics, Natural History, Philosophy, Law, Medicine, Divinity, History, Travels, Biography, Philology, Rhetoric, Logic, Education and many other subjects; blind farmers, merchants, traders, architects, cabinet-makers, carpenters, coopers, carvers, basket-makers, upholsterers, broom-makers, brush-makers, rope-spinners, carpet weavers, mat-makers. etc; and even a blind road-surveyor. But we do not wish to imply by citing these various professions, that we consider each one named, to be appropriate for any considerable number of blind persons. Some, in fact, can scarcely be deemed so for any; but genius takes strange freaks sometimes. The thought we wish to present is, that there is no good reason why blind persons should be expected, as a class, to confine themselves to the limited sphere of action, presented by the few simple mechanic arts taught in our institutions, or even the profession of music in connection therewith; and therefore, that our scheme of education should have a wider range than is merely necessary to prepare them for the limited sphere just mentioned. Give them a liberal education, and, as far as practicable within the scope of an institution for their instruction, a thorough training in the practical affairs of life, and the peculiar bent of each one's character will guide him in the choice of an appropriate profession. If there are those who feel themselves called to labor in the Christian Ministry, let them be prepared to enter upon a theological course in some appropriate institution; if some are naturally qualified to enter upon a literary career, let them have the necessary preparation therefor; and so in the case of any other pursuit.

There are many persons who, having been afflicted with blindness after entering upon some particular profession, are found to possess sufficient energy and tact to continue in that profession, despite the impediment offered by their deprivation; and it should be the aim of all our institutions to encourage such a proceeding as far as possible, rather than to advise persons thus circumstanced to give up their former business and enter upon some one of the trades taught in them. In this way, they can best serve the interests of the persons in question, and, at the same time, those of the blind in general, inasmuch as it would tend to enlarge the field of action for all.

In regard to the business training of the pupils of our institutions, whatever be the employment taught, we beg leave to say that it should be of the most thorough character, conforming to that of apprentices in similar establishments for the seeing. Nothing short of this will insure their success in the gaining of a livelihood.

RESULTS IN THE PAST.

It is confidently believed that, with the early adoption of the course and means of instruction indicated in the foregoing pages, the past results in our institutions would have been much more satisfactory than they have been. More of their graduates might have been enjoying the benefits of a liberal education, and more of them might have found success in their efforts to gain an honorable independence in the walks of Literature and Science, instead of depending, so largely as they do, upon industrial pursuits, in which they are less able to compete with seeing persons.

As a leading principle for the guidance of himself and others who might follow him in the work of educating the blind, the illustrious founder of the first school devoted to that object, Valentine Haüy, laid down the maxim, heretofore enunciated. And though his followers, in all countries, have professedly adopted this maxim, they have, in most instances, failed to employ the necessary means for carrying out the principle involved. Consequently, most of the institutions of the old world have degenerated into mere asylums, or at best, work shops for the carrying on of a few simple trades, extremely little attention being paid to mental culture. In our own country, too, a tendency in the same direction is observable.

While all of our institutions have been commenced with an avowed intention to offer to the blind youth of our country, the same facilities for education as are enjoyed by their seeing brothers and sisters, few, if any of them, have been found to realize, in a complete sense, the high hopes of their well meaning founders. True, individual cases, here and there, are not wanting, where blind persons of peculiar talents have succeeded in elevating themselves to positions of useful independence; but this has been accomplished, in most instances, by dint of irrepressible energy of character, rather than through the direct agency of institution training. The masses have left school, after passing through a nominal course of instruction, greatly improved in many respects, it were useless to deny, but, nevertheless, without that thorough, practical development of character which is necessary to put them in a condition for successful competition with others in "the battle of life."

This may be an inevitable result, but after thirty years of practical experience with the obstacles, real and imaginary, which are strewn along the pathway of the sightless, all of which years, with slight exceptions, have been spent in connection with institutions for the blind, we cannot so regard it. Nor can we withhold an expression of our honest convictions upon the subject. Give to your blind children, in reality, as well as in profession, an equal opportunity with your seeing ones, for thoroughness of physical and mental training, and we are sure you will receive a more satisfactory return for your investment of time and money in establishments for their education.

But in what direction must we look, you will naturally ask, for the causes of the disappointment adverted to? In answer to this inquiry, it may be affirmed, and that with due deference to the motives of our co-laborers in the interesting field which engages our mutual attention, that the true bearings of the subject have not been thoroughly apprehended, and as a consequence, the real difficulties of the case have been but imperfectly provided for.

Judging from the prevailing practice of institutions, it has been virtually assumed by their founders and managers, that to take a blind child from his home among cruelly indulgent friends, with unawakened mental faculties and undeveloped physical powers, and place him, with these unfavorable antecedents, in an institution for a period of five, six or seven years, is to put him upon an equal footing with his seeing brother. In this brief time, the former is expected to acquire a thorough English education, commencing with his a, b, c's, and become a skillful performer and teacher of music; or perfect himself in one or more mechanic arts. While the latter, with the advantages of a very different sort of home training, excellent schools of every grade, and well appointed work shops or other places of business, is allowed all the years of his minority to prepare himself for the duties and trials of life.

This assumption is palpably absurd. It might be less so, however, were our institutions provided with facilities, in the way of apparatus, etc., equal to those of the best educational establishments for the seeing, which, unfortunately, is not the case. Most of these things have to be constructed especially for the blind student; and the demand for them is so small that, in the absence of the usual stimulus of competition in their production, they are quite expensive. Therefore, as their importance is not duly appreciated by those who furnish the pecuniary means, we are, as a general thing, but scantily provided with them. Moreover, such appliances as we have, are mostly of rude construction, and but poorly adapted to the end in view.

Again, as a consequence, perhaps, of the limited term for which pupils are usually received into our institutions, or, it may be, from lack of correct views as to the most effective methods of teaching, the minds of the pupils are distracted by imposing upon them a multiplicity of studies and occupations at the same time. Their ordinary school branches; their vocal and instrumental music; their mechanical employments, sometimes two or three of these, must, it is thought, be carried on simultaneously. Otherwise, their term of instruction will have expired ere they can make a passable show of having accomplished their object in coming to school. And, as to systematic physical culture, this generally receives little or no attention. Indeed, there is no time for it, consistently with the crowding system pursued; nor is its necessity appreciated.

It seems never to have occurred to the managers of our institutions for the blind, that, in requiring their pupils to master a trade, or other profession, to be used as a means of gaining a livelihood, simultaneously with the acquirement of their school education, they are asking more of them than is expected of seeing youths, with their superior advantages. True, manual labor schools for the seeing have been tried in a few instances, but they have, in each case, been abandoned as unsuccessful experiments. It has been found that their graduates make neither good scholars nor good mechanics, much less both. Why, then, pursue this exploded system with the blind?

Furthermore, the absence of a proper system of classification, such as may be found in our modern graded schools for the seeing, together with the existing want of suitable text books in raised characters, for the use of the pupils in their study hours, while preparing for their recitations in the class room, renders the business of instruction difficult and laborious for the teacher, and comparatively unproductive of good results to the pupils. As a rule, the instruction is imparted by familiar lectures, in which everything is so simplified that little else than the memory of the pupils is cultivated. Hence, instead of their mental faculties being thoroughly trained and educated, they are simply instructed, by filling their intellectual stomachs, as it were, with food already digested by others. We say, this is the rule. But that there are no exceptions to it, we do not wish to affirm. Nor do we conceive it necessary that such should be the rule, even in the absence of text books. On the contrary, it is possible to teach as efficiently without those aids as with them; but to do so, involves additional labor, as well as peculiar qualifications, on the part of the teacher.

Moreover, in the departments of Music and Handicraft, the only ones depended upon for preparing the pupils for self-maintenance, there is not usually that efficiency of drill which may be found in establishments for the seeing. Nor can it be otherwise, while the crowding system, above alluded to, continues to be pursued. Besides, the plan upon which the business of the work shops is generally conducted, does not comport with the principle which we are striving to advocate in this communication. Were the parties in charge of them personally interested in the results, as is the case with ordinary manufacturing establishments, the apprentices would be better trained in all respects, and hence, better prepared to make their way in the world after finishing their course of instruction. But as this subject is elsewhere treated upon at some length, we forbear further comments here.

Still further, the general policy of our institutions, with regard to the employment of teachers, has not been such as to insure the best possible results to their pupils. It has been a "penny wise and pound foolish" policy. Unlike schools for the deaf and dumb, we have not, as a rule, offered sufficient inducements in the way of salary, for persons of the right kind of qualifications to prepare themselves for our peculiar work, and continue in it as a life-long business. The burthen of our teaching, having thus far been of an elementary character, it has apparently been thought that any one of moderate qualifications for teaching in seeing schools, should be competent to teach the blind. Whereas, a proper examination into the subject will show that the rudimentary instruction and training of minds which suffer from the closing up of one of the principal avenues of knowledge, require even higher qualifications in the teacher, than the branches which are subsequently taught, after the faculties have been brought into a condition of full activity. It is gratifying to know, however, that there are of late years, some indications of improvement in this direction.

Finally, the result of all these things is, that our graduates launch their frail barks upon the ocean of life in a condition but illy calculated to weather the storms they must needs encounter. And when they founder, as founder they must, a cry of necessary incompetency salutes their ears. But whose fault is it? Surely not theirs. Did they possess, instead of mere smatterings of knowledge upon a few subjects, accompanied with fourth rate skill in performing upon some musical instrument, or in plying some half-learned manual art, a thorough, harmonious development of the mental and physical powers, such as results from the training received by seeing persons, the case would be far different.

Now, if the foregoing remarks are grounded in truth, and we beg leave to assure your Board that we have not been writing fiction, can it be justly affirmed that the blind youth of our country have hitherto enjoyed equal educational advantages with the seeing? Most assuredly, not. We have not meant to insist that blindness is not an infirmity, and therefore brings no disadvantage to the smitten one. What we contend for is, first, that inherent mental weakness is not a necessary accompaniment to the impairment or total loss of vision; secondly, that by a thorough and well directed course of bodily and mental training, the resultant disadvantage may be almost wholly overcome, and, thirdly, that the prevailing management of institutions for the blind is not the best that can be devised for surmounting the difficulties of the case. Imperfect attempts at complete mental development having necessarily failed, the tendency is, as heretofore hinted, to bring our institutions down to the condition of mere schools for manual labor. This, too, with the plain fact staring us in the face, that it is to the proper exercise of the physical powers, pre-eminently more than the mental, that blindness presents the greatest obstacle.

By some of our co-laborers, we may be charged with censoriousness, in giving expression thus frankly to our honest convictions. If any such there are, we would assure them that we are actuated by no other motive than an earnest desire to promote the well being of a class, for the amelioration of whose unfortunate condition we have thus far spent the best years of our life.

Respectfully submitted,

W. H. CHURCHMAN.

APPENDIX D.

BY-LAWS

OF THE

INDIANA INSTITUTE FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE BLIND.

ARTICLE I.

DESIGN OF THE INSTITUTION.

SECTION 1. The design of the Institution shall be strictly educational, having reference only to the physical, mental and moral training of the young blind, of both sexes, residing in the State, and not to the providing of an asylum for the aged and infirm, or a hospital for the treatment of disease.

SEC. 2. It shall be regarded as a department of public instruction, and therefore its privileges shall be tendered, free of expense, to all suitable applicants from within the State.

SEC. 3. Pupils from without the State may, at the discretion of the Trustees, participate in the benefits of the Institution by paying a reasonable sum for their support and education.

ARTICLE II.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

SECTION 1. The Board of Trustees shall hold its regular meetings at the Institute, and the day of meeting shall be the first Wednesday in each month, unless otherwise ordered in special cases.

SEC. 2. The majority of the members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

SEC. 3. Special meetings may be called by the President, or by one of the Trustees and the Superintendent.

ARTICLE III.

THE SECRETARY.

SECTION 1. The Secretary of the Board shall be elected annually by the Trustees, at their regular meeting in April, and be subject to removal at any time for just cause.

SEC. 2. He shall issue all notices of the meetings of the Board and keep full minutes of the proceedings at each meeting, furnishing attested copies of the minutes to those whom they concern, when appropriate to do so.

SEC. 3. He shall keep all accounts between the Institution and the State Treasury Department, and shall draw all warrants upon the Auditor of State for allowances by the Board, which warrants shall be signed by the President and himself, and certified to by the Superintendent of the Institution.

SEC. 4. He shall furnish annually to the Board, on the 1st day of November, a detailed statement of all the allowances made during the preceding year, to accompany their annual report, setting forth the names of the parties to whom the allowances were made and on what account. He shall also furnish to the Board for insertion in their annual report a general statement of the expenses of the year, classified under appropriate heads.

SEC. 5. He shall carry on the official correspondence of the Board, keeping copies of the letters written, and carefully filing those received.

ARTICLE IV.

THE SUPERINTENDENT.

SECTION 1. The Superintendent shall be chosen quadrennially by the Board, at their regular meeting in July, and his term of service shall commence on the first day of October succeeding his election. He shall be subject to removal at any time, for just cause, after a fair hearing before the Board.

SEC. 2. He shall be the executive head of the Institute, and the medium of communication between it and the Board of Trustees.

SEC. 3. He shall have the nomination, subject to confirmation by the Board, of all the teachers and other assistant officers in the Institution, together with the attending Physician, and shall be responsible for the faithful performance of their several duties, as well as for the advancement and good behaviour of the pupils under their charge.

SEC. 4. He shall keep a register of all the pupils received into the Institute, embracing their names and ages, the causes and degrees of their blindness, the dates of their admission and discharge, the post office address of their parents or guardians, and such other information concerning them as may be deemed important.

SEC. 5. In the School Department, he shall prescribe the course and methods of instruction, the time to be devoted by teachers and pupils to the several branches of study, the apparatus and text-books to be employed, the system of discipline, and other matters pertaining to the mental and moral improvement of the pupils. And it shall be his duty to make frequent visits to the several class-rooms during the hours of instruction, for the purpose of keeping himself informed as to the progress and deportment of the pupils, and of making such suggestions to the teachers as he may deem useful.

SEC. 6. In the Work Department, he shall prescribe the kinds of work to be learned by the pupils, and the number of hours per day to be devoted to labor; and shall be required to pass frequently through the several shops and work-rooms, for the purpose of keeping himself informed of the progress and deportment of the pupils, and of making such suggestions to the master mechanic and others employed as he may deem useful. He shall direct the manner in which the business of the female branch of the Work Department shall be conducted, and shall see that full justice is done the pupils in the male branch by the Master of Handicraft.

SEC. 7. He shall direct the purchase of the necessary apparatus for the work-shops, and see that it is kept in proper condition for use.

SEC. 8. In the female branch of the Work Department, he shall purchase, or cause to be purchased, all needful apparatus and materials, and cause all moneys received from sales of manufactured articles to be paid over to him at least once a week, keeping a strict account of his disbursements and receipts on account of the department, and reporting the same monthly to the Board.

SEC. 9. In the Household Department he shall prescribe the number of domestics and other assistants of a like character to be employed, fix their rates of compensation, and pay their wages, presenting a monthly account to the Board for money thus paid out, which account or pay-roll shall exhibit the number, occupation and wages of the persons employed.

SEC. 10. He shall see that all the pupils are comfortably and respectably clad, and when their friends, through inability or neglect, fail to provide them with the necessary clothing, he shall supply the same and present the accounts therefor to the Board for allowance. He shall also defray the traveling expenses of such pupils as are not provided by their friends with means to return to their homes when required to leave on account of vacation or otherwise, and present his account for the same as in the case of expenditures for clothing; and in case of the death of pupils at the Institute, whose remains are not removed by their friends, he shall defray all necessary funeral expenses, presenting accounts for the same in like manner as aforesaid. On the first of April and October in each year he shall make out against the respective counties in which the pupils reside, who shall have been provided for as specified in this section, itemized accounts of expenditures in behalf of such pupils and present the same to the Treasurer of State for collection, taking his receipt therefor and presenting it to the Auditor of State that he may place to the credit of the Institution the amount of such accounts.

SEC. 11. All other ordinary expenses, whether of the Household or School Department, shall be defrayed by the Superintendent, and accounts for the same laid before the Board for examination and allowance.

SEC. 12. Whenever furniture, apparatus, work material or the like, to any considerable amount, shall in his judgment be needed, the Superintendent shall so inform the Trustees, and if they shall consent to the expenditure, he shall purchase, or cause to be purchased, the requisite articles upon the best practicable terms, and present the necessary accounts to the Board for allowance.

SEC. 13. He shall have care of all the buildings and grounds of the Institute, and shall see that they be kept constantly in order, both as to cleanliness and minor repairs.

SEC. 14. He shall exercise due care in the promotion of the health of the pupils, by requiring of them frequent and thorough ablutions, exercise in the open air, and entire abstinence from all injurious practices, and providing them with plain, substantial diet, together with comfortable dormitory accommodations, and in all cases of sickness, shall see that they have prompt medical treatment, as well as every other necessary attention.

SEC. 15. He shall certify to all accounts, for whatever purpose, before the same shall be presented to the Board for examination and allowance.

SEC. 16. He shall use his utmost endeavors to imbue the minds of the pupils with the strictest principles of morality, and to induce them to avoid all unbecoming personal habits, requiring them to attend regularly upon public worship, at such places as may be severally chosen by themselves or their friends.

SEC. 17. While he is enjoined to pay particular attention to the religious instruction of the pupils, he shall studiously avoid and prevent the inculcation of sectarian views, and the same care shall also be observed in regard to partizan politics.

SEC. 18. He shall see that due respect always be had to the appropriate observance of the Sabbath by all persons connected with the establishment, neither permitting visiting on that day at the Institute, nor allowing the pupils to make visits out of the house, or engage in improper occupations or amusements.

SEC. 19. It shall be considered by him an essential feature in the management of the Institute to prevent all unnecessary intercourse between the male and female pupils, and he shall therefore see that they are never together, excepting in the class-rooms during the hours of instruction, or in the presence of some officer.

SEC. 20. He shall make an annual report to the Trustees, embracing an account of the condition and progress of the several departments of the Institute, of the course of instruction pursued, and of the health and general improvement of the pupils, with suggestions for the advancement of the objects of the Institute.

SEC. 21. He shall have power, as provided by law, to suspend any subordinate officer for incompetency or dereliction of duty until the next succeeding meeting of the Board, when he shall report the case for final adjustment by that body.

SEC. 22. He may delegate to his several assistant officers any of the duties specified in the foregoing sections, which may be appropriately entrusted to them; and in order that all the officers and other persons engaged in the Institute may have a clear understanding of their relative duties and obligations, he shall be required to draft a set of regulations, defining their respective duties, a copy of which, after approval by the Trustees, shall be furnished to each; and for every essential change in the said regulations, the further approval of the Trustees shall be necessary.

ARTICLE V.

THE SUBORDINATE OFFICERS AND ATTENDING PHYSICIAN.

SECTION 1. The Steward, (if such officer be found necessary,) Matron and Attending Physician, shall be appointed annually by the Board at their July meeting, and their term of service shall commence on the first of October following the time of such appointment. They shall be subject to removal at any time after a fair hearing before the Board.

SEC. 2. The teachers employed in the several departments, including the Mistress of Handicraft, shall also be appointed annually by the Trustees at their July meeting; and their term of service shall be coincident with the duration of the school session next succeeding the time of such appointment.

SEC. 3. In case the Superintendent or Trustees shall not be prepared at the time specified for the nomination or appointment of any one or more of the officers named in the first and second sections of this Article, or in case of casual vacancies occurring at any time, appointments may be made at any other regular meeting of the Board.

SEC. 4. The subordinate officers shall co-operate cheerfully with the Superintendent in the general management of the Institution, and shall labor assiduously in their respective departments for the promotion of its objects.

SEC. 5. The Attending Physician shall visit the Institute upon the call of the Superintendent, and at such other times as he may think necessary or proper, rendering such medical and surgical services, except in capital operations, to the pupils as may be deemed necessary. His compensation shall be fixed and paid by the Board of Trustees, and no charge shall be made to any pupil for medicine or medical attendance by the regular Physician.

SEC. 6. The Physician shall, when such is deemed necessary by the Superintendent, employ the aid of a consulting Physician at his own cost; but such consulting Physician shall in no case supersede the regular one.

ARTICLE VI.

THE SCHOOL SESSION.

SECTION 1. There shall be one annual session of the school, commencing on the first Wednesday after the fifteenth of September, and closing on the last Wednesday in June following, leaving a vacation of twelve weeks.

SEC. 2. It shall be considered obligatory upon all of the pupils to spend the period of vacation at their respective homes.

SEC. 3. When in any case the friends of a pupil shall fail to remove him or her from the school at the commencement of vacation, the Superintendent shall cause such pupil to be sent home, and charge the expense of removal to the county in which he or she may have residence, as provided for by legislative enactment.

ARTICLE VII.

THE ADMISSION AND DISCHARGE OF PUPILS.

SECTION 1. All blind persons residing in the State of Indiana, who are between the ages of nine and twenty-one years, and who are not incapacitated by physical, mental or moral infirmity for useful instruction, shall be considered eligible for admission as pupils of the Institute; but no one whose age does not come within the limits just prescribed shall be received, excepting in peculiar cases, and by special action of the Board of Trustees.

SEC. 2. The Board shall cause to be prepared an appropriate circular setting forth the objects of the Institution, the regulations pertaining to pupils, and such other information as may be of interest to applicants, together with definite instructions as to the manner of procedure in making application; a copy of which circular shall be forwarded to the friends of any person wishing to become a pupil, and no one shall be sent to the Institute until said instructions shall have been complied with.

SEC. 3. The Superintendent shall have authority to admit all applicants who come within the prescribed rules as to age, etc., but shall refer all other cases to the Board.

SEC. 4. All the regular pupils shall be required to be in attendance at the Institute at the commencement of each session, and to remain until its close, unless prevented by sickness or other exigency; and in case of the failure of any pupil to comply with this requirement, without a sufficient reason, the right of such delinquent pupil to the privileges of the Institute shall be forfeited, at the discretion of the Trustees.

SEC. 5. There being no limit fixed by law for the time during which a pupil may remain in the Institute, it shall be left to the Superintendent and Trustees to determine in each individual case as to the proper time for dismissal.

SEC. 6. Pupils may be expelled by the Superintendent for misconduct, when they shall be adjudged by him to be incorrigible, or when, in his judgment, the good of the Institute demands it, but his action in all such cases must be reported to the Board for final adjustment.

SEC. 7. Pupils who complete their course of instruction with credit to themselves, may be furnished with a diploma by the Superintendent, signed by himself and countersigned by the President and Secretary of the Board.

Adopted by the Board of Trustees October 24, 1866.

ANDREW WALLACE, President.

APPENDIX E.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REGULATIONS,

PRESCRIBING THE SPECIFIC DUTIES OF THE SUBORDINATE OFFICERS, IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE BY-LAWS.—ARTICLE 4, SECTION 22.

ARTICLE I.

LITERARY DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of the several teachers in the Literary Department, to thoroughly instruct the different classes assigned them, in the principles of the branches of knowledge pursued, studiously avoiding the inculcation of merely mechanical or superficial forms.

SEC. 2. It shall be a ruling principle in their teaching, to develop and train all the mental faculties of their pupils, considering the mere inculcation of knowledge as of secondary importance, compared with the proper training of the mind.

SEC. 3. They shall employ, so far as applicable, the most improved methods used in schools for the seeing, giving their instruction, as far as possible, by means of oral lessons, with appropriate illustrations, rather than reading from text books, so that ideas and not mere words, may be taught; and they shall require the pupils to recite by topics, carefully avoiding the use of leading questions in conducting the recitations.

SEC. 4. The principal teacher will be expected to have the immediate oversight of all the male pupils when out of school and not under the particular charge of any one else, seeing that they arise promptly at the ringing of the morning bell, retire as promptly at the required time in the evening, conduct themselves in an orderly manner in their dormitories, attend punctually at their meals, deport themselves properly in their various resorts about the buildings and grounds, and in all other respects conform to the regulations of the Institute.

SEC. 5. Whenever text books, apparatus, stationery, or the like, shall be needed for the use of this department, the principal teacher shall report the same to the Superintendent, and no purchase must be made by him without authority from that officer.

N. B. See General Regulations.

ARTICLE II.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The teachers in the Music Department shall give instruction in both vocal and instrumental music to all the pupils of the Institute who may be found competent to receive such instruction, and to those who possess decided musical talent, in the theory and composition of music also, as well as in the tuning of pianos and other instruments.

SEC. 2. In their selections for practice they shall resort to the compositions of the most approved authors, carefully rejecting every piece possessing an immoral tendency, and such as would serve in any degree to depreciate the tastes of their pupils.

SEC. 3. In teaching vocal music they shall consider it of primary importance to inculcate clearness and distinctness of enunciation, applying, so far as practicable, the rules of elocution to the vocal exercises of their pupils.

SEC. 4. In the instrumental department they shall teach the pupils to perform upon the pianoforte, the organ, and all the varieties of wind and stringed instruments in common use, so far as required by the Superintendent.

SEC. 5. In imparting their instructions in the principles of music, they shall observe all of the rules laid down for the guidance of the teachers in the Literary Department.

SEC. 6. They shall seek for the pupils frequent opportunities of hearing the performance of skillful artists, in order to the improvement of their tastes.

SEC. 7. The principal music teacher shall have the immediate direction of all the assistants employed in this department, and shall be responsible to the Superintendent for the faithful performance of their duties. He shall also see that all the instruments are kept in good repair, and in every other respect properly cared for, preventing their being meddled with by pupils who are not receiving instruction upon them.

SEC. 8. Whenever new instruments, music, or other articles pertaining to this department shall be needed, the principal teacher shall report the same to the Superintendent, and no purchase must be made by him without authority from that officer.

N. B. See General Regulations.

ARTICLE III.

INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The Master and Mistress of Handicraft shall have immediate charge of the male and female Work Departments, respectively, and shall carefully instruct the pupils in such manual arts, and at such times, as may be designated by the Superintendent.

SEC. 2. They shall keep accounts of all articles manufactured by the pupils in their respective departments, in such manner as to show the value thereof, and report the same monthly to the Superintendent.

SEC. 3. They shall require their pupils to deport themselves, during the hours devoted to work, in the same quiet, orderly manner as is usual in the school rooms during class recitations.

SEC. 4. They shall have the immediate charge, respectively, of all the buildings or apartments, as well as the tools and fixtures, devoted to the use of the Work Department, and shall see that they are kept constantly in order.

SEC. 5. They shall have the immediate direction of all assistant instructors or other persons employed in their respective departments, and shall be responsible for the faithful performance of the duties assigned said persons so employed.

SEC. 6. The Master of Handicraft shall conduct the shops under contract, supplying all the work materials needed in his branch of the department, at his own expense, and receiving all the wares manufactured by the pupils under his direction, as a compensation for the instruction given them; but he shall be furnished by the Institution with all tools and other appurtenances needed by the pupils in plying the several mechanic arts in which they are being instructed.

SEC. 7. The Mistress of Handicraft shall have the charge of all stock pertaining to her branch of the department, and of the sales.

thereof. She shall keep a strict account of all money received from sales, and pay over the same weekly to the Superintendent.

SEC. 8. She may, at her discretion, furnish materials to pupils for overwork, and pay them for their labor, out of the receipts from sales, at such rates as may be, from time to time, authorized by the Superintendent; and the amount thus paid must be reported to the Superintendent at each weekly settlement.

SEC. 9. Each of the officers named in this article shall keep the Superintendent duly notified of the wants of his or her branch of the Industrial Department; and they shall in no case pay out money to meet these wants without authority from the Superintendent.

N. B. See General Regulations.

ARTICLE IV.

HOUSEHOLD DEPARTMENT.

The Steward.

SECTION 1. The Steward, (if any be employed,) shall have the oversight of the buildings and grounds of the Institute, together with the various appliances for warming, bathing, cooking, washing, etc.; the household furniture, the vehicles and harness, and all other property of the kind, excepting such parts of the buildings and their appurtenances as may be assigned to the particular care of other officers; and it shall be his duty to see that all these are kept in constant order. When repairs of any kind are needed, he shall report the same to the Superintendent, and receive his instructions as to the manner in which, and the parties by whom, they shall be executed. He shall also have the oversight of the horses and other stock belonging to the Institute, seeing that they are properly fed and otherwise cared for by the persons having the immediate charge of them.

SEC. 2. He shall have the immediate direction of the male employes in the discharge of their respective duties, reporting to the Superintendent all persistent delinquencies on their part.

SEC. 3. He shall, in connection with the Matron, have charge of the various supplies for the Household Department, seeing that they are properly cared for and economically used; and when these need replenishing, shall make the necessary purchases under the direction of the Superintendent.

SEC. 4. He shall purchase, under the direction of the Superintendent, all necessary clothing supplies for such of the male pupils as are provided for in that respect by the Institute.

SEC. 5. He shall pay the wages of all employes out of money furnished him by the Superintendent for that purpose, and take receipts on the pay-roll for such payment, but shall have no authority to change their rates of compensation as fixed by that officer.

SEC. 6. He shall examine all bills for the expenses of the Household Department, and certify to their correctness before passing them to the Superintendent for presentation to the Board; and he shall keep all the accounts of the several departments of the Institution with the Board of Trustees, Superintendent, subordinate officers, pupils, or other parties.

SEC. 7. In addition to the several duties specified in the preceding sections, he shall lend his aid to the Matron when necessary in the care of the sick among the male pupils, and shall at all times be subject to the call of the Superintendent for the performance of any other reasonable service pertaining to the business of the Institution.

N. B. See General Regulations.

The Matron.

The Matron, being the female head of the establishment, shall participate in its general management, and co-operate with the Superintendent in the government of the pupils. Her special duties shall be as follows:

SECTION 8. She shall have the particular charge of the female pupils and younger boys when out of school, spending as much of her time with them as practicable, and laboring assiduously to promote their moral and religious improvement, and also to teach them to deport themselves in a courteous, amiable, and affectionate manner, as well in their intercourse with each other as with the officers of the Institute.

SEC. 9. She shall have charge of all parts of the building, as to their cleanliness, and shall see that they are kept constantly in order, permitting the female pupils to perform as much of the labor as is practicable.

SEC. 10. She shall have the care of all the bedding belonging to the Institute, together with the clothing of all the pupils, and shall see that they be duly changed, washed, ironed, and kept in order; the repairing, as well as the making of new articles, to be done under her immediate direction. She shall also have the charge of the clothing of the officers who board in the Institute, so far as regards washing and ironing.

SEC. 11. When new clothing supplies are needed for such female pupils as are provided for in that respect by the Institute, she shall purchase the same under the direction of the Superintendent.

SEC. 12. She shall have the immediate supervision of the female domestics, assigning to them their particular duties, and directing them in the performance thereof, and shall also see that they deport themselves in a respectful and orderly manner, obeying strictly the rules of the house concerning them.

SEC. 13. She shall have charge of the culinary affairs of the establishment, directing the purchase of marketing and the preparation of the food for the tables, and shall, in connection with the Steward, see that all the groceries, provisions, etc., are well taken care of and economically used.

SEC. 14. She shall be present during the meals of the pupils, to see that they are properly attended to by the domestics, and that they deport themselves in an orderly and becoming manner.

SEC. 15. She shall have the care of the patients, in case of sickness occurring among the pupils, administering to them as directed by the Physician or Superintendent; or in case of the employment of a nurse, she may delegate to such employe so much of the care of the sick as may be authorized by the Superintendent.

SEC. 16. She shall keep the Steward duly notified of the current wants of her department in the way of groceries, provisions and other like supplies; and when articles in the way of house-furnishing goods or clothing supplies are needed, she shall report the same to the Superintendent; but she shall in no case pay out money or incur obligations to meet these wants without the previous consent of the Superintendent.

SEC. 17. In case of the employment of an assistant Matron, or housekeeper, she shall direct the performance of the duties of such officer, as prescribed by the Superintendent.

N. B. See General Regulations.

ARTICLE V.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

SECTION 1. In discharge of the foregoing obligations, the officers will, in all cases, be subject to the advice of the Superintendent, and it shall be their duty to consult him in a frank, courteous and unreserved manner, in whatever pertains to their respective departments.

SEC. 2. All of the officers will be expected to render themselves generally useful to the pupils, by spending as many of their leisure hours with them as is practicable, encouraging and assisting them in the prosecution of their studies, reading to them from useful works, striving, by judicious advice, to correct their habits and manners, and in every other way laboring for the promotion of their improvement and happiness. Especially shall they use their best endeavors to prevent them from acquiring, or continuing in, eccentric personal habits or mental peculiarities, and to teach them to deport themselves in a courteous, amiable and affectionate manner, as well in their intercourse with each other, as with the officers of the Institute.

SEC. 3. Every teacher or other officer shall be responsible for the good behavior of the pupils while under his or her particular charge, whether for instruction or any other purpose; and it shall be the duty of all to lend their aid at every other time to the Superintendent in the preservation of order among the pupils, by judicious advice and restraint, and by reporting to him any disorderly conduct which may come to their knowledge.

SEC. 4. No teacher, or other person employed in the Institute, shall inflict corporeal punishment upon any pupil, but when extreme cases of disobedience occur, such as merit more than a reprimand, they shall be reported to the Superintendent.

SEC. 5. Promptness will be expected of all, in attendance upon their classes, or in the discharge of any other obligation, and none will be at liberty to absent themselves from duty, even where substitutes may be provided, without consultation with the Superintendent, excepting in cases of emergency. Nor will any teacher be at liberty, during the hearing of any regular class, to engage in reading, writing or other occupation not belonging strictly to the duties of the class-room.

SEC. 6. No person shall be at liberty to grant leave of absence to any pupil, from the premises, unless authority so to do is especially delegated by the Superintendent.

SEC. 7. No person will be allowed to read in the presence of the pupils any book, pamphlet or paper which may be disapproved of by the Superintendent; nor shall any one attempt to influence the minds of the pupils either against or in favor of the views of any particular religious society or political party.

SEC. 8. All persons boarding in the Institute will be expected to be in their rooms at a reasonable hour at night, so that the house may be duly closed, and unnecessary disturbance avoided to those who may retire early.

SEC. 9. It shall be obligatory upon all the officers having control of pupils, to require of them a prompt and rigid performance of duty, allowing no neglect of study or work, or infringement of known regulations to go unproved.

APPENDIX F.

TO THE PUBLIC.

INDIANA INSTITUTE FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE BLIND.

This Institution is located at Indianapolis, the Capital of the State, occupying a healthful and beautiful site in the northern part of the city.

It is strictly an Educational Establishment, having for its object the moral, intellectual and physical training of the young blind of both sexes residing in the State, and is, therefore, neither an asylum for the aged and helpless nor a hospital for the treatment of disease.

We are almost daily in receipt of applications from persons who wish to be treated for the cure of blindness, and we here take occasion to explain for the benefit of such, that we have no surgical or medical department connected with our institution. The Chicago Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary, however, we learn from its reports, has treated many Indiana patients without charge, where there is inability to pay; and it may be worth while, therefore, for parties asking medical treatment to address their inquiries to that establishment.

For the information of applicants and other interested parties, the following compilation is made from the regulations of the Institute, viz:

I. The school year commences on the first Wednesday after the 15th day of September, and closes on the last Wednesday in June following, making a continuous session of forty weeks and leaving a vacation of twelve weeks during the warm season.

2. As a rule, applicants who are under nine or over twenty-one years of age, are not admitted, but exceptions are sometimes made in peculiar cases, at the discretion of the Board of Trustees.

3. No person of imbecile or unsound mind, or of confirmed immoral character, will be knowingly received into the Institute; and in case any pupil shall, after a fair trial, prove incompetent for useful instruction or disobedient to the regulations of the Institute, such pupil will be thereupon discharged.

4. No charge is made for the boarding and instruction of pupils from the State of Indiana, but those from without the State are charged at the rate of $150 per session of forty weeks, payable in advance, i. e.: one-half at the beginning and the other half at the middle of the session.

5. All are required to come provided with an adequate supply of good comfortable clothing, embracing suitable articles for both summer and winter wear, in such quantity as to admit of the necessary changes for washing and repairing.

6. Each article of clothing should be distinctly marked with the owner's name, in order to prevent confusion or loss, and must be sent in good order and condition, not only upon the first entrance of the pupil, but also at each subsequent return from home after the vacations.

7. In cases where the parents or guardians of pupils from the State of Indiana, are unable through indigence to supply them with the necessary clothing, the same is, by law, provided by the Institution, and the amount of its cost collected from the respective counties in which such pupils reside; like provision is also made for defraying the traveling expenses of indigent pupils to and from the Institute.

8. It is positively required that every pupil shall be removed from the Institution during the annual vacation of the school, as well as at any other time when such removal may be deemed necessary by the proper officers thereof; and in case of the failure of the friends of any pupil to comply with the requisition, provision is made by law for the sending of such pupil to the Trustee of the Township in which he or she resides to be by him provided for at the expense of the county.

9. Persons bringing pupils to the Institution or visiting them while there, cannot be accommodated with boarding and lodging during their stay in the city.

10. All letters to the pupils should be addressed to the care of the Institute in order to insure their prompt delivery.

11. Persons wishing to procure the admission of pupils, should apply to the Superintendent, by letter or otherwise, for printed instructions as to the manner of procedure, and no pupil should be sent to the Institute until such instructions shall have been complied with.

W. H. CHURCHMAN,

Superintendent.
